Color Can Make Drab Home Place of Beauty

More than ever before it is being realized that color can transform an uninteresting home into a place of beauty and cheer; that color can help make a room feel warm or cold; that color, wisely employed, can give brightness to a hallway that is dark or modify the effect of sunlight in a room that is overexposed.

And the base of color schemes of the various rooms in usually the floor—heretofore restricted in line to a few variations of the natural color of the wood.

A new method of finishing maple flooring has made possible the employment of color in the floor. This uses an acid stain process developed recently by the Maple Flooring Manufacturers' association in co-operation with the industry generally.

The process may be used by any painter of ordinary skill, using the stains and varnishes recommended by the association. It imparts to northern hard maple a variety of delightful transparent permanent finishes, and their application brings out the delicate grain of the wood, creating a distinctive type of floor beauty never before achieved.

In the application of the process the stain is covered by one coat of lacquer and two of finishing varnish. Some of the colors adopted by the Maple Flooring Manufacturers' association include spanish brown, early American, autumn brown, silver gray, dove gray, royal blue, pastel green, orchid and an ebony black.

Equipment of Kitchen Must Be Up to Date

In a recent house-planning contest in which 6,000 "Ideal" plans were submitted the Judges were unanimous in their report that the kitchen is the most carefully studied part of each plan.

As a matter of fact, the average housewife spends 75 per cent of her waking hours each day in the "engine room" of the home. No wonder she is willing to forego a Queen Anne front if she has to pay for it by having a Mary Ann back.

Ideally, the kitchen should have a central location in the house, for easy access to all other parts. And in order to save miles of walking during the preparation of the thousand meals each year, it must be as small as consistent with the equipment which must be placed there—a minimum of, say, 100 square feet for the average home.

One of the most effective means of cutting down needless steps is the

Farm Board Aids Growers

Washington, July 15—The farm board said today 6,000 Florida citrus fruit growers and hundreds of growers of vegetables and other products in that state have been benefited by its assistance to cooperative organizations. Commitments or more than $3,000,000 were made to the Florida Citrus exchange soon after the board was established.

Compact and Economical Design Just Right for Small Family

Floor Plan.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Here is a cottage type bungalow, very small, very compact, but offering a large amount of living accommodation at a very low cost. In the first place, being but 26 feet square, this home may be built on a small lot and still leave a comfortable margin of space for light, air and privacy between it and its neighbors on either side. The square plan is, of course, the most economical one possible, giving the greatest amount of floor space in proportion to the amount of wall and roof construction. And in the case of this particular house, the design is such as to take full advantage of every inch of the available space.

This is a four-room house with the living room serving also as a dining room, an arrangement which has been gaining wide popularity in recent years with the demand for better utilization of space. The separate dining room is, from this point of view, a large waste, for it is used but a very small portion of the day. With the arrangement shown here it is possible to provide in this small cottage two bedrooms of a very comfortable size, and each provided with a good closet.

Between the kitchen and one bedroom is the bath, and all of the rooms open onto a central hall space which occupies but a small part of the total floor area even though it must also accommodate the basement stair.

In exterior appearance this little home is particularly pleasing. This is due, in large measure, to the roof lines which have been so handled as to avoid the flat appearance which detracts from so many small homes of this type.

Five Farm Women Selected For Honor

By F. H. JETER

Raleigh, July 20—Wayne, Currituck, Vance, Jones and Rowan counties have had honor brought to them with the announcement last week that farm women residing in these counties have been selected for the title of Master Farm Homemaker by the North Carolina State College co-operating with the Farmers' Wife, national farm women's publication of St. Paul, Minnesota.

The women selected for this title are Mrs. E. L. Peele of Pikeville, Wayne County; Mrs. J. J. Forbes, Sr. of Shawboro, Currituck County; Mrs. L. E. Barnes of Henderson, Vance County; Mrs. Annie C. Hay of Maysville, Jones County, and Mrs. J. F. McKnight of China Grove, Rowan County. The public ceremonies during which the recognition will be bestowed will take place Wednesday evening, July 29, at the 29th annual meeting of the North Carolina Farmers' and Farm Women's Convention.

The exercises begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock with Mrs. Jane S. McKimmon presiding. An address will be made by Miss Lucille Reynolds, of the editorial staff of The Farmers' Wife, and each of the five women will be called upon for a brief response telling something of her work and accomplishments in the past several years.

The five women selected for this honor were nominated by their neighbors and were chosen from a list of hundreds of such nominees. A committee appointed by the magazine and the home demonstration department of State College then studied the nominees carefully and especially the answers to about 500 questions. The final selection was made after carefully considering the work done by the women in managing their homes, education and development of their children, community work and the health records of their families. Each one has made some notable contribution to her community and state, says Mrs. McKimmon.

A COINCIDENCE

Now old preacher McClure Was a good man I'm sure, As good as they're usually made. He lived a long life With a fond loving wife, But at last in the earth he was laid; The neighbors all said When they heard he was dead They felt sure he to heaven had gone, And in that they were right For with greatest delight He was wakened by Gabriel's horn.

As he entered the gate Where Saint Peter did wait To give greetings to all the elect The preacher's face glowed And much pleasure he showed To receive more than he did expect; As he wandered at will Just taking his fill Of the blessings that Heaven did bestow All at once came a thought To his mind, and it brought A remembrance of earth down below.

"I have it!" said he, "This place reminds me Of Beaufort where I used to live, And I now know just why I hated to die And take what the future might give; But it's my fond belief That there was once a thief Who snaked into Heaven one day And stole a small bit And made it just fit On the shore line of old Beaufort Bay." Edward Halton, Beaufort, N. C. July 21.
