"MEMORIES"

By R. M. Gaskins I have had the girls from England, Have been with the girls in France. But the sweetest girl I ever knew, Was a girl I met by chance. It was on a lonely island, A place that only God knew, It was there I learned to love her, There where our friendship grew. So I took a ship and sailed away, To a port that was in Brazil, There I met more pretty maids, But my heart was back home still. For this girl that I had learned to love, I promised one day my hand, So I took a ship and sailed back home, To this forgotten land. I came back home with the fondest hopes, That some day a little face, Would come to me in my weary life, To fill a vacant place. She came God love her little soul, Came with a loving smile, Came to fill this vacant spot, But not on that lonely Isle.

For this girl that I had learned to love, Had moved in the passing years, Moved to another lonely spot, A town on the old Cape Fear. So today we are here in the passing years, With two little angel tots, And I'm glad to know in the passing show, We're not in the land God forgot, "Portsmouth."
