Early Planted Yams Make Heavier Yield

RALEIGH, June 9—Sweet potato plants set in the field before the middle of June will produce better yams and heavier acre yields, said L. P. Watson, extension horticulturist at State College.

When planted early, he explained, they have the benefit of a long growing season, and they usually have a chance to get fairly well established in the ground before extremely hot, dry weather sets in.

The crop will be improved if it receives a good grade of commercial fertilizer containing three per cent nitrogen, eight per cent phosphoric acid, and eight per cent potash applied with a drill at the rate of 800 to 1,200 pounds per acre.

Two-thirds of the nitrogen should come from inorganic sources and one-third from organic sources. The potash should be derived from muriate or sulphate of potash, Watson stated.

Stable manure should not be used unless it is well rotted and can be broadcast at least a month before planting time.

Disease-free seedlings should be planted in clean soil, if possible. If the soil is infested with stem rot or wilt, treat the seedlings with Semesan, or dip the roots and stems in 20-50 Bordeaux mixture, said Dr. R. F. Poole, plant pathologist.

He warned that Bordeaux mixture may injure the plants unless used with caution. Treat only freshly dug seedlings, and set them out immediately after they are dipped. Then water the plants at once.

Or the seedlings may be dusted with a mixture of 25 per cent monohydrated copper sulphate and 75 per cent lime.

Crotalaria Is Good Soil-Building Crop

RALEIGH, June 9—Crotalaria, a legume which has been used for several years by farmers in Florida and in the Carolina sandhills to build up poor, thin soil, has been introduced on several farms in the Huntersville erosion control area, according to agronomist H. O. Beck of the Soil Conservation Service.

Agronomists of the Service recommend that crotalaria be seeded on sandy soils which are low in fertility and deficient in organic matter and which are unsuited to the production of lespedeza.

It is not advisable to seed crotalaria near the barn, pasture or poultry range, Beck warned, as the seed of certain strains (such as Crotalaria spectabilis) are poisonous. This should not worry farmers, however, since livestock will not eat the foilage. In the Piedmont region crotalaria should be seeded broadcast at the rate of 25 or 30 pounds to the acre, though good results have been obtained from 15 to 20 pounds per acre.

On the farm of J. L. Choate, two miles south of Huntersville just off the Charlotte highway, a severely eroded, sandy 4-acre field which was seeded in crotalaria last year supports a dense stand of plants averaging 6 feet in height.

In the event the crotalaria does not re-seed itself in that section, Choate will plow it under and seed the area to another crop. The crop which follows will be benefitted greatly from the increased nitrogen supply added to the soil by the legume and by the increased organic matter which improves the physical texture of the soil.

State College Holds Older Youth Meeting

RALEIGH, June 9—The older conference at State College this week is the first organized attempt ever made in North Carolina to help farm youth through one of the most significant yet unsettled periods in life.

The conference is designed to give guidance and special training to rural boys and girls between 18 and 25 years of age, said L. R. Harrill, 4-H club specialist at the college.

These young people are a little too old for regular 4-H club work, yet are not served adequately by adult organizations, Harrill pointed out.

After the conference, he continued, an effort will be made to form older youth's organizations in the different counties which will be patterned somewhat on the nature of advanced 4-H Clubs.

Work Sheets Must Be Prepared By June 12

"Don't forget that June 12 is the last day to sign a work sheet for the 1937 soil conservation program," warns E. Y. Floyd, of State College.

All growers who have not signed up either last year or this year must deliver their work sheets to their county soil conservation offices by Saturday to become eligible for payments, he added.

Work sheets are necessary in helping plan a farm's program of soil conservation and in determining how much diversion and soil building payments are earned, Floyd explained.

"If you operated under a work sheet last year, but have made a change in your farm since then, notify your county agent at once," he pointed out.
