SURPLUS POTATOES

Eastern Carolina has another of those surpluses of Irish potatoes, and the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation hopes to be able to provide some of them for the needy families and at the same time to relieve the market of some of its surplus. The plan, says Miss Mary E. Thomas, extension nutritionist at State college, should be commended from a nutrition standpoint.

What the nutritionist has to say regarding the value of the potatoes to the needy may have some special significance because needy families are not always supplied with such valuable foods. But the facts of food value in potatoes remain the same for all consumers. Miss Thomas points out:

"Potatoes are one of the principal sources of carbohydrates. They contain mineral salts, especially phosphorus and iron; a small quantity of protein, and significant amounts of vitamins B, C and G. The cellulose furnishes bulk and the minerals supply to the diet the alkaline or base-forming substances that are needed. All these elements tend to perfect an energy-giving food.

"Further, potatoes may be prepared in many appetizing ways and the thrifty housewife may serve them almost daily and yet not jade the appetite of her family. It is not only good economy to stock up on potatoes now, but city housewives will be helping move the surplus from an over-burdened market.

"To retain the valuable minerals and vitamins found just under the potato skins, potatoes should be cooked in their jackets. Low income families depend upon potatoes for from 13 to 25 per cent of their vitamin C."—(New Bern Sun-Journal)

DIED WITH BOOTS ON

Unfortunate was the death of Patrolman I. T. Moore at the hands of a murderer. But also refreshing is the courage and fight he demonstrated at death. Mortally shot twice with a .45, the patrolman, nevertheless, was able to stagger forward after his fleeing assailants, to shoot down one and wound the other, before finally falling himself—empty pistol still grasped in hand.

It is some sort of justice that he was able to shoot down one of his murderers personally and to wound the other so that his capture was made easier. The highway patrol and State lose a real officer in the death of Patrolman Moore.—(New Bern Tribune).

EASTERN CAROLINIANS PROUD OF ATLANTIC BEACH

Lots of people who go down to Atlantic Beach never stop to think just what goes on over there on the part of the management to make the place so nice for the visitors.

To begin with almost a hundred thousand dollars was spent so that people could drive over. The casino was built and it burned down so another one was built. Paving was put down and the crushed stone and cement that you use for that is expensive and you can't even use the beach sand for mixing with cement—that, too, has to be shipped in. As soon as possible the toll was removed from the bridge.

Then every year an orchestra has been provided and the whole place has been conducted in a fine way. The beach has been kept clean, debris has been removed, glass has been picked up, life guards always on the job—and their number increased when large crowds are in the water.

The surf at Atlantic Beach is considered by those who "know their way 'round'" to be the world's best—an east and west beach with just the right slope.

The finest thing about it is that throughout all the years it has been and it remains the gathering place of nice people. North Carolina's first citizens find its salt and sunshine to their liking. There is swimming, fishing and fellowship and North Carolinians are proud of this ocean resort and the manner in which it is operated. (The Times of New Bern)

BAILEY "REP" UNSCATHED

Senator Bailey of North Carolina emerged from the forensic fray with his reputation unscathed and the scalps of several colleagues, notably that of Wagner or New York . . . Holding the floor for the better part of two sessions, the North Carolinian was matchless in his extended debate with Wagner, displaying a familiarity with the relief administration calculated to befuddle Harry Hopkins himself. Wagner was no match for Bailey, and suffered in the verbal clashes from apparent unpreparedness.

Not since Huey Long's last stand in the Senate—his spectacular filibuster against adjournment—has a Senator commanded attention comparable to that enjoyed by Bailey . . .

The galleries weren't crowded as in the days of the Kingfish, but many more Senators were present than usually were attracted by Huey, and they followed Bailey's scathing, yet constructive criticism, of the relief administration more closely and thoughtfully than they followed the Louisianian.

It seemed quite benefitting, and a deserved compliment, that during his speech, every member of the North Carolina delegation in the House drifted into the chamber to hear their senior Senator.

Senator Bailey is rated among the so-called arch-foes of the President's Court proposal, and while his name doesn't appear among the leading "strategists," is a foregone conclusion that he will take an important part in fighting the Court issue. He is a great lawyer, a magnificent debater, and if the intensity of his feelings don't develop a bitterness akin to that displayed in the Judiciary Committee report, the chances are that his contributions to the controversy will take high rank in senatorial debates of history.—(The Atlanta Journal).
