

Record Channel Bass (Red Drum) Was Taken By Jamie Styron Of Ocracoke

WORLD'S RECORD Channel Bass or red drum, was taken at Ocracoke Island in 1939 by Jamie Styron, who is pictured above standing in the background. Unfortunately for the rod and reel records, however, this big fish, of a species which attracts anglers from all parts of the United States to the shores of Ocracoke, was landed in a net. Jamie Styron is one of the island's commercial fishermen. At left in above photo helping pose the fish is David Gaskill, widely known operator of Pamlico Inn. The year 1939 resulted in another record fish for the American coast. Marshall Dana caught the Atlantic Coast record Blue Marlin, a 593 1-2 pound giant while fishing with rod and reel off Hatteras. Neither of above records have been broken.—(Photo by Fred Stedman.)

SELECTEES ARE PUBLIC RECORD

Only Confidential Data Is About Health

All non-confidential information concerning Selective Service registrants is a matter of public record and must be made available to any person upon request during business hours of local boards in North Carolina. General J. Van B. Metts, State Director of Selective Service, declared today. The State Director pointed out, however, that the public is not permitted to handle records.

The only data to be withheld as confidential are the record of the physical condition of a registrant, all answers on the questionnaire under the subject of dependency, except the names and addresses of claimed dependents, the answers to questions on previous military service, and the registrant's court record, the Director said.

Pointing out that Selective Service Form 100, the Classification Record of Registrants, contains practically all pertinent information of a non-confidential nature, Director Metts emphasized that this form is subject to examination by the public during local board business hours.

This record includes the name of the registrant, his order number, his serial number, his age and his race.

If he volunteered, the date of his volunteering is shown. If his record is transferred to another board for the purpose of classification, physical examination or induction, the date of such transfer and the date of the return of the registrant's record from the transfer board are indicated.

Form 100, the Director said, also shows the date the questionnaire was mailed, the date of its return, if the time for its return is extended, or the date of a claim made for deferment by a person other than the registrant.

The date of notice to appear for physical examination, the date the registrant appeared and the date the classification notice was mailed to the registrant are also indicated. It further shows whether the registrant was placed in Class 1A, 1B, 1C, 1D or 1E, or Class 11 A or 11B, or Class 111, or Class IV A, B, C, D, E, or F.

If the registrant makes a request to appear before the local board, that date is recorded as is the date fixed for his appearance and a notation as to whether he did appear.

This Classification Record (Form 100) also shows the date of an appeal to the Board of Appeal, the date when the registrant's record is sent to the Appeal Board, and whether or not the classification was continued.

It further records the date of the order when the registrant should report for induction, if he is so ordered, and the time he is to report for transportation to the induction station, giving the date and the hour, and then shows the final disposition of the registrant at the induction station and the date when he was accepted or rejected, or if he failed to appear.

There is also a blank space for remarks in which should be included such information on an appeal to the President as the date when the appeal was forwarded; also whether the registrant has become a member of the land or naval forces, whether a notice of delinquency has been mailed to the registrant, and whether the board reported the registrant to the United States Attorney for prosecution as a delinquent.

"Form 100, therefore, is virtually a complete history of the registrant except as to specified confidential matters," Director Metts said. "News agencies, newspapers, radio services and the public generally can get any and all information, except confidential matter, relating to a registrant from this record." Furthermore, he said, if local boards or local board clerks refuse to give out the requested information without adequate cause for such refusal, the matter should be reported to the State Headquarters immediately.
