THE ROSE

T'was Spring and in this war-torn land, A maiden held her lover's hand. And in his hand she gently placed A new blown rose of virgin grace. And as the church bells sweetly rang, She raised her eyes and softly sang O' take this with you when you go, This new rose which my love will show!

Keep it with you where e're you go, This symbol of my love for thee, And remember well these words I say, Think of them when you're far away.

This rose of beauty, love and trust, Cannot be scarred by war's great lust, And though you sail far o'er the sea, I know that you'll come back to me.

And though he did not say a word, His eyes spoke words of love she heard, He tenderly kissed her lips and then, Turned never to come back again.

When she next saw him cold and dead, She kissed the wound where he had bled, And then she saw the rose on his breast, Over his heart it was closely pressed.

Mrs. Davis Attends N. Y. Beauty Show

Mrs. Davis who has just returned from the New York Beauty Show says that feminine beauty is not based on silly whims, as most men would have you believe, but rather on current political events and major situations which affect the world as a whole, or often on popular books and plays.

March issue of the Beauty Advisor says, quote:

"In 1917 and 1918 coiffures followed the general emotions of the public. Hair was extravagantly dressed and beauty effects were carried to an extreme. Today, however, there is a definite move afoot to eliminate active and harmful hysteria, and this influence is readily seen in the new Spring hairstyles.

"Shorter coiffures with a swept-up motif will take the lead in 1942 Spring hairstyles. Waves and curls arranged in an extremely feminine fashion will be seen in profusion because hairdressers agree they denote a calm, serene way of living.

"The very fact that industry is increasing its activities and that every business in the country feels a new impetus is seen in the shorter coiffures which are designed for flattering practicality with stress on beauty of line."

MORE ABOUT SENIOR PLAY

lesque queen, Vivacious Betty Weldon, a playwright, is played by Elizabeth Mace. Walton Hamilton will have the role of handsome Albert Saunders, a struggling young inventor. Also ably supporting there are Katy Lou Jones as Mrs. Plunket, Pansy Mason as Peggy Plunket, David Caffrey as Horace Weldon, Dallas Blake as the chauffeur, Tommy Piner as the "hootch inspector" and wide-eyed Margaret Barbour as the French maid who has more than a leg in her stocking.

Miss Lena Duncan and Miss Eleanor Jones, who have found it necessary to reword the play somewhat in order that it be more suitable for presentation by High school students, have stated that "You'd Be Surprised" has qualities more in likeness to a large stage production than any senior play they have ever produced and feel sure that it will rate along with "Jewels of the Desert" and "The Belle of Barcelona" as one of the greatest hits ever presented at the school.

FORT BRAGG, March 26.—When Major Wallace Wade and his son, Pvt. Wallace Wade Jr., speak on WPTF's all soldier program, "Fort Bragg Presents" next Monday night, the 10th training battalion of the Field Artillery Replacement Center will be more than adequately represented.

Coincidentally enough, Wade Sr., has been assigned to the same battalion where his son is undergoing basic military training.

How long Duke University's famed gridiron mentor will stay at the 10th no one here knows. It has been suggested that Wade, under the command of Col. John Butner with whom he played football at Brown, will remain with Butner's outfit for a month to orient himself to the military environment and then be transferred to the Artillery Officer's School where his proven leadership will be utilized in some capacity.

Fellow - privates of Wallace Wade Jr. were betting even money here today that when Wade Jr. gets on the air Monday night, the private at the very least will ask the major for a three-day pass.

For Wade's answer in a drama more stirring even than My Son! My Son! . . . the entire personnel of this Post will bestow to "Fort Bragg Presents" on WPTF Monday (March 30) from 8:30 to 9:00 P. M.
