Tricks of the Baseball Field.

Blocking a base-runner is another of the tricks constantly resorted to. It has to be done skillfully, just enough to throw the runner out of his stride, but not enough to warrant the umpire in declaring it a case of intentional interference. Ty Cobb, probably the fastest base-runner in the country, some time ago tried an experiment. He made the circuit of the bases, when no base-men were present, in thirteen and one-fifth seconds, passing each bag close to the inside corner. Then at a subsequent time he made the circuit with each baseman in place acting just as he would in a game. Not one of the basemen did anything that an umpire would call interference, yet before Cobb got around he was actually interfered with five times. Each baseman stood by the inside corner of his bag, compelling Cobb to go on the inside, thus increasing considerably the size of the circle he made. The short-stop contrived to keep in the runner's path just long enough to shorten his stride between second and third, and then, running across the line from third to home as if to back up the catcher, he again made the runner shorten up his stride, yet avoiding actual contact in each case. It took Cobb two and a half additional seconds to make the circuit because of this interference. Such are some of the "tricks of the trade," and the rules are constantly being changed to stop them, with more or less success. But in spite of all hooliganism that creeps in, the sport remains a fairly clean one, on the whole. Gambling on the grounds has been eliminated to a remarkable degree, and there is seldom any basis for suspicion that a player has "thrown" a game. For a national game it is certainly far ahead of cock-fighting, bull-fights and horse-racing. — Current Literature (November).

Spit, Quit, Fit.

Hines, Ala. — In a letter from this place, Mrs. Eula Mae Bradley says: "I used to spit up all I ate. I was tired and sleepy all the time. My head ached, and I could hardly drag around. Since taking Cardui, this has entirely quit, and now I feel quite fit." Mrs. Bradley suffered from nervous indigestion. Cardui builds up the nervous system, and strengthens the womanly constitution. That's why Cardui helped Mrs. Bradley and why it will help you. Try it.

Making Ranches into Farms.

Driving along the streets of San Antonio—"SanAntone," the Texans call it—you pass at intervals luxurious homes shining with considerable newness. "Whose?" you ask. "Rich rancher—bought land for a trifle and sold out to farmers—worth half a million." Repeated is the story until one gains the impression that the small farmer has taken the Southwest. To a degree he has—or is on the way to do so. His immigration came naturally. When the homesteads of Kansas and Nebraska had been exhausted and the Oklahoma rush had over-run the fertile Indian reservations, the only outlet remaining was the ranch country of the farther Southwest. There were millions of acres used only for grazing, yet with possibilities of agriculture. Up in the middle states were thousands of farmers seeking a place where they could obtain for investment more acres than they could buy at home. The railroads saw benefit to themselves by colonizing the unbroken reaches of the plains. Shrewd organizers were ready for a venture. Out of this came the greatest land movement known in the history of the West, not excepting the westward trek of settlers soon after the close of the Civil War. It was thoroughly planned. Tons of "literature" were scattered through the agricultural States of the Mississippi valley. Special rates were made for home-seekers' excursions. Twice a month "home-seekers' day" saw the trains run in four or five sections, each filled from the front seat of the "smoker" to the rear berth of the last Pullman. Land companies were equipped with their own special cars, with dozens of automobiles at the destination and the pick of the wide-awake, hustling agents who could paint the prospects in most glowing colors.—From "The New Era of the Ranch Lands," by Charles Moreau, in the American Review of Reviews for November.

MISS HELEN TAFT BADLY BRUISED

Ipswich, Mass., Oct. 25.—Miss Helen Taft, daughter of President Taft, is suffering from painful but not serious injuries at her home in Beverly as the result of being thrown to the ground when her horse stumbled at a meeting Myopia Hunt Club at the Ipswich trotting park yesterday. Miss Taft was half way over the course when the accident happened. She was on her feet before other members of the hunt club could reach her and remounted and finished the run, although it was evident that she had been badly bruised.

Glidden Tour.

The keen rivalry between owners driving their own cars, and mechanics driving for factories by which they are employed has been one of the interesting and amusing features of this year's Glidden tour. Most of the cars were driven by their owners, and many of these were wealthy Southerners who entered the contest partly from an interest in good roads, and partly from the enjoyment of a fall outing. To them the contest has been a holiday excursion with zest added by the element of competition. But to those taciturns which were manned by factory mechanics, it has been a matter of grim business, calling for all the skill and care possible. The result has been, that while overspeeding and heedlessness of consequences has landed some of the amateurs in the ditch, and pounded their cars incessantly, the professionals have got the most out of their machines over every foot of road, and saved them in every way they could.
