One difference between Cook and Bryan is, Bryan never got there.

Wonder how the fellow who took the New Year pledge not to drink is holding out these cold days.

One thing should console the farmers these cold days, they destroy thousands of bugs and insects that play havoc with the crops.

The convenience of the street car is to be more appreciated this weather than during the balmy spring days.

We wonder who Bryan was referring to when he said there was another, who could poll more votes than he.

In his speech at Raleigh Saturday night Mr. Bryan said he was not a candidate, but gave the party the gentle reminder that he was not out of politics.

Four Democrats deadbound for the Presidency, and four for the senate in our state, is what we call a double quartette.

We suppose there is great rejoicing among the others of the fold when they hear the glad tidings of great joy that William Jennings is no longer a candidate.

To take a side glance at the Democratic situation at present one would think Wilson is against the field. And Wilson lost his home state in a recent election.

The greatest applause given Bryan in his speech at Raleigh Saturday night was when he said "That there were other men in the Democratic party, who could poll more votes than he." Did the people mean by that, that they did not want Bryan?

Perfectly Harmonious.

The great democratic jollification which met at the Raleigh hotel Washington Monday night for their Jackson day dinner, is reported in glaring headlines as being perfectly harmonious. We should say harmonious with Governor Wilson holding a similar meeting at another place, and allowing only those to attend who wore Wilson badges. Harmonious, again we say harmonious, with Governor Harmon, considered by many the strongest democratic possible nominee, sending his regrets that he could not be present. With Governor Marshall of Indiana who had another engagement, with Representative Underwood, leader of the house democracy, and also a presidential possibility, sending word that his doctor would not let him attend because of threatened appendicitis. With what was remaining the entire meeting was harmonious.

Look After the Poor.

Is it not the duty and demand of our churches, Sunday schools and Christian organizations at this season of the year to look after the poor? Do we Christian people in Burlington and Alamance County who send money to other nations not know of some one near us who is suffering and who need our support? Do we not know of some home that we can make pleasant and cozy these cold winter nights where suffering and hardships perhaps exist. Stop a moment and think.

The Sylvan Valley News, which is in position to get republican information straight, says that the fight for the Republican nomination for Governor of North Carolina will be between John M. Morehead and Thomas Settle. This leads the Charlotte Chronicle to say: We have heard as much. They are both strong men, in the division of party influence pretty well matched. Whichever gets the nomination, however, will get the full republican vote, for the Republican quarrels end when the ticket is made. There is some sentiment in Morehead's candidacy, and he would be, perhaps, the stronger. There are many Democrats, personal friends, who would vote to send him to the seat once occupied by his grandfather, one of the greatest of North Carolina's long line of Governors. The campaign for the nomination is going to be a pretty one, and the campaign for votes is going to be one that will command the attention of the Democrats.

The Canal Problem.

It seems but yesterday that the President of the United States, after a conference with Panama, decided to dig the Panama canal and the first shovelfull of dirt was moved in what is destined to be one of the greatest works of all time.

However recent it may seem, seven long years have rolled by and today it stands near completion. Hundreds of millions have been sunk in the century old dream of inter-ocean highway. For five years the trade of the world has been in the throes of adjustment to an entirely new condition. West and east are clasping fingers. Financial problems are figured from new basis. In a practical sense the entire distance around the world has been divided by two. That the completion is nearing is being evidenced by the fact that the Interstate committee of the House are discussing the question of tolls. After a week or ten days it will probably be discussing whether American shipping is to have preferential treatment. After weeks of consideration it will doubtless report. After oratory and oratory the question will doubtless be settled, and the world may know on what terms it may use the canal.

For in the meantime the canal is being pushed to its completion.

"He Ain't Katched It Yet."

Bryan's running for the Presidency reminds us of the story of the little negro boy who was a regular attendant at a boys reading club, and always called for the same book and always turned to the same place at which he looked eagerly and then laughed heartily. Those who attended the club wondered at the performance so many times repeated. So on a certain night one of the attendants followed the little fellow and looked over his shoulder, saw that he opened the book to a picture of a bull chasing a terrified negro across a field. The looker on was just about to ask what the fun was, for the laugh had again come rippling up to him, when the boy looked around, grinning.

"Golly!" he cried, "he ain't katched him yet!"

A Guilty Conscience.

Again we are brought face to face with the fact that a guilty conscience is by far the worst punishment that can be placed on a person, and that the remorse and lashing of a guilty conscience is more than many a frail human being can bear. In the recent confession of the Rev. Richeson of Massachusetts, the tongue of murder cries out under the yoke of remorse. A guilty conscience is pleading for repentance and forgiveness. The pathetic confession of a man gone wrong, of the snuffing out of an innocent life and the probable wrecking of another, caused by one who, until a few months ago, was a leader for good and uplifting humanity. Lead by the folly of his passion he has followed on and on until he now pleads for repentance as he stands with the lashing and remorse of a guilty conscience. In this confession his plea is that God will save his soul.

R. I. U. No. 2.

Mrs. Mollie Ireland of Greensboro is visiting her sister Mrs. J. W. Somers.

Mr. Wm. Love of Greensboro N. C. and Mrs. Nannie Henly of Paris Texas, spent Thursday and Friday of last week with their cousin Rev. A. F. Isley.

G. L. Simpson is the champion hog raiser on No. 8. He killed two that weighed about 900 lbs. The sausage and etc. that we got out of those hogs was fine.

We spent 1st. of January in Durham N. C. visiting J. F. Taylor and Lonnie D. Hamlin, Rural Carriers. We enjoyed the day splendidly especially our visit to Mr. Hamlin's home. Mrs. Hamlin knows how to make any one feel at home. We are "gwine back agin."

Lonnie has an automobile and he showed us the town in good shape.

E. A. Perry has had a very sick child, we are glad to note that the little fellow is about well.

We wish to thank our patrons for the nice favours rec'd during the Christmas Holidays. We got our share We hope by giving the best of service to merit these favours.
