POSTUEFICE ROBBED

High Point, Jan. 29. - For some time, it is said, a number of the business men and other citizens of High Point have been missing some of their mail from their lock boxes held in the postoffice. In several instances, as is frekindness to her during her sick- quently the case, the patrons would look over their mail, especially on Sundays, and return it to the lock box or drawer. When they came again to take it out, it was gone. Among those who have been missing mail in the foolling: Union Furniture
Company, Wachovia Bank &
Trust Co. and High Point Hardwood Lumber Company.

It is supposed that certain postoffice "lobby loafers' have caught est. on to the combination of the lock boxes or drawers, and, at opportune times, opened them. Then again some of the patrons are a little careless at time and inadlocked.

Be this as it may, there has been somewhat of a stir here for the last several days and the business men and other citizens are ed Barton Cruikshank: up in arms about this depredation. Rotton Corn Spreads Pellagra To Horses

Lexington, Ky., Jan., 27.—A disease similar to pellagra among humans, is reported to have made H. Henderson on the 28th day its appearance among horses in Madison county. A dispatch from Richmond states that 20 or more valuable horses have died there in the last three weeks from the malady, which is caused by eating rotten corn.

Robert Walker, the veteran horse man of Richmond says there is apparently no cure for the disease, which seems to affect the brain of the animal attacked. Farmers and horsemen who have suffered loss by the malady have taken steps to its ravage by care fully preparing the feed for their horses and seeing that no defective corn is given them.
