Some Curious Wills.

It is with a feeling a some fear that a man today writes a will without the advice of a lawyer. Therefore quaint and picturesque last testaments are becoming more uncommon. Actural wills, says a writer in the Green Bag. are even more interesting absorbing than the wills of fiction.

Paul Revere cut off his grandson Frank, "who now writes his name Francis." with $1.

It is less than a year since Boston was started by a posthumous joke of a Miss Cora Johnson, who left a will disposing of some $100 000, while her actual estate was less than $100.

Perhaps more subtle bit of humor was the provision in the will of a Scotch idesenting minister, who bequeathed a sum of money to his chapel at St. Ives to previde "six Bibles every year, for which six men and six women day after the morning service, W. Faucette's farm. the minister kneeling the while at the south end of the communion table and praying God to di- day. rect the luck to his glory."

After divine service one of the clergymen drops 21 six-pences on a tombstone, to CALLED THE JUDGE A A Church Home for Visitors be picked up by as many poor people, widows having the preference. The will providing for this is lost, and the distribution as, ur says: funds. The bequest dates back several hundreds of years.

Here is a pretty bit of sentiment from the will of James sympathies often aroused by reason of the extra burden and care entailed on loving mothers, poor in the things of earth, who have brought twins into the world, as an expression of that sympathy I leave in trust to my beloved town $1,000, with the provision that the interest be devided January 1 between all twins born in Marblehead during the previous year. In case no twins are born during a given year, the interest shall be added to the principal." John Sherman, the author of the anti-trust law, directed that within two years of his death his books and papers were to be placed in the hands of some competent person, who should "preface and publish an impartial biography of me, with selections of my speeches and writings.". Ten thousand dollars was set aside for that purpose, and the testator explains that this is done 'not to secure a enlogy, for I am conscious of my faults, but I claim that in my duty to the public I have been honest, faithful and true.'

Lord Bacon in 1625 bequeathed his soul and body to God, while his name and memory he left to men's charitable speeches and to foreign nations and next ages.

Men have likewise talked to me leadeth thereto. When the king was reigning, I did make my son wear a surplice, being desirious that he should become a bishop, and for myself I did follow the religion of my master, then came the Scotch, who made me a Presbyterian; but since the time of Cromwell I have become pin independent.
