

A Dream Now Being Realized.

Some of these days there will come into the South a man heralded by no trumpet, but with an iron jaw and determined look, who will be the harbinger of a declaration that will so startle the natives that in turning around they will do so quickly that in the words of the lamented Senator Vance, "The hind part of their breeches will be in front."

What is this man of might going to do?

When the farmer drives into town with his load of seed cotton to this man's place of business he will go, and before you have time to turn around this cotton will be swished through the gin, separating the seed from the elastic and fleecy staple. Then comes the divergence, the staple is picked up in its beautiful and soft condition and carried to the machine that converts into thread, and on to be weaved into its many and varied patterns of cloth; sent then in a dozen different ways to be finished in the shapes of all the habiliment that adorn the human race.

Simultaneously with the staple the seed is picked up and hurled on its race of disintegration, ground, crushed, screened and separated from its identity into its varied channels of usefulness. You hear the roar of the machinery as it strikes. The noise almost stuns you. But you are determined to follow it in its mad career, and as you hear the sound of the hull parting from that part of the seed that gives the life to the plant a quiver of admiration electrifies your mind for the genius of the man who is creating where we wasted.

On you go to see this hull baled and on the farmer's wagon to be conveyed to his home to have more grinding and crushing through the digestive organs of his stock, making fat, and the waste to go back to the field as fertilizer to raise more cotton and prove the law of reciprocity. Before you can get back to the place of division of the hull the guide meets you and hurries you to another building, and you get there in time to find out the hulls have had more crushing and have been made into pulp, and you see the roll of paper on the dray going to the printing press that will tell the world what marvelous things are being done in the South.

You hurry back and find out that while you are gone the "inwards" of that seed is running a business of its own. It was picked up by electricity, more grinding and crushing and hurled at a tremendous speed through a tube to a mill, where, after the oil is extracted and refined, creating a beautiful, pure and whole some domestic article, you hear another roar of machinery and your guide tells you that is the dross coming from the refining process. Following up, you find this dross has been turned into a sanitary soap to be shipped to all parts of the world. You ask your guide if this is all, but by following him you come to activity in a new place; farmers' wagons being loaded, engines switching, cars being loaded with fertilizer to be distributed over the entire land to make more fertility, more cotton, corn and meat, and more wealth; all to be under one big brain, with its ramifications managed specifically, each leading to a central head from which comes the centrifugal force made by the many units that know no resistance.

If this is a dream, have not stranger dreams come true?—W. B. Troy, in Manufacturers' Record.

Shakespeare "Too Profane."

(From The New York Tribune.) Protest is being made against the young girls who attend the eighth grade of Public school 20 in Flushing, being compelled to read extracts from Shakespeare where the words shock their sensibilities. While the boys might revel in certain paragraphs the girls held an indignation meeting and reported the matter to their parents.

A letter was published yesterday in a local paper in Flushing signed "A Father," in which the writer wanted to know if the board of education could not in certain cases "provide some harmless expletives to be used in cases of emergency." In his letter "A Father" said that the girls in the eighth grade were reading the "Merchant of Venice" when it fell to one of a peculiarly sensitive and refined nature to impersonate the character of the Prince of Morocco in Act 2, Scene 7, when as the wooer of fair Portia, he chooses the golden casket containing the ghastly skull and exclaims:

Oh, hell! what have we here? A carrion death, within whose empty eye

There is a written scroll. "Against the dictates of a tender conscience and under the stress of her supposed duty the girl went obediently through her lines," continues the letter.

Spring Items.

Crowded out last week.

Spring Graded School will close April 20th, with an entertainment. Everybody invited. Young People's prayer meeting is held every Sabbath afternoon with good attendance.

Mrs. P. W. Cates, and step son, Clovas, have just returned from a visit to relatives and friends in High Point and Greensboro.

Mr. George McBane who was very ill some time ago is now able to be out again.

Mr. R. C. Guthrie one of our Merchants had the misfortune of losing a horse some day's ago.

Mr. S. F. McBane seems to be improving in health. Hope that he will soon be well again.

Green School boys crossed hats with Spring Graded School last Thursday the score being a tie.

Mr. John Winslow is indeed a pleasant caller at Mr. G. G. McBane's every Sunday night, and once in the meantime for rarity. Ask Miss Vera about it.

Miss Sandra McBane was all smiles Monday morning. Mr. Amsy Ivey got lost Sunday evening and found himself at Mr. G. G. McBane's.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hargrove visited at Mr. W. H. Guthrie's Sunday evening.

We hope that "Jack" is going to reform we saw him carrying a Bible Sunday evening. Ask Miss Lambeth about it.

Mr. M. S. Guthrie wears a broad smile, its a boy.

Billie Zachary visited at W. M. Lewis's Saturday night.

Miss Mary Lambeth visited at Joseph Woody's Friday night. "This is leap year." Ask "Bob" about hiding the lantern in Mr. Mc's straw stack.

Our mail carrier failed to go Friday "last" on account of the swollen waters. Guess he will be delighted to see the mud clear up.

Mr. Eugene Mann and family visited at Mr. C. W. Johnson's Sunday.

Miss Ruth Zachary wears a pleasant face since Goley came back.

Miss Mattie Zachary seemed rather sleepy last Monday morning.

Danger of Pine Beetle

Washington, D. C., March 23, Repetition of the enormous losses sustained by timber owners throughout the South last year because of the destructive pine beetle may be prevented this year if timber owners will simply burn the bark of the dead and dying pines from which the needles have not yet fallen, the burning to be done before May 1st, according to Dr. A. D. Hopkins, who is in charge of the Forest Insect Investigations for the Bureau of Entomology.

"The people of the South have an opportunity to make a final effort, which if properly directed will go far towards controlling this pest," says Dr. Hopkins. "The beetle is now passing the winter in the bark of the dead and dying pines from which the needles have not yet fallen. These trees should be cut down and the bark of the main trunks destroyed by burning before May 1st or the beetles will come out with the warm weather and take up their work of destruction. This object may be accomplished without direct expense by turning the infested trees into cordwood or lumber. But it is essential that this cordwood be burned before May 1st and that the slabs of the lumber with the bark on be burned before that time. It is only necessary to treat the dead on dying trees from which the needles have not yet fallen. The dead trees from which the needles have fallen have been abandoned by the beetle and may be disregarded in control operations."

Fearing that the danger from pine beetle is common to the whole South, whose interests it considers identical with theirs, the Southern Railway Company is co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture in warning Southern timber owners of the threatened danger and how it may be avoided.

Bad Spells

"I suffered, during girlhood, from womanly weakness," writes Mrs. Mollie Navy, of Walnut, N. C. "At last, I was almost bed-ridden, and had to give up. We had three doctors. All the time, I was getting worse. I had bad spells, that lasted from 7 to 28 days. In one week, after I gave Cardui a trial, I could eat, sleep, and joke, as well as anybody. In 8 weeks, I was well. I had been an invalid for 5 weary years! Cardui relieved me, when everything else failed."

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

If you are weak and ailing, think what it would mean to you, to recover as quickly as Mrs. Navy did. For more than 50 years, this purely vegetable, tonic remedy, for women, has been used by thousands of weak and ailing sufferers. They found it of real value in relieving their aches and pains. Why suffer longer? A remedy that has relieved and helped so many, is ready, at the nearest drug store, for use, at once, by you. Try it, today.
