A telephone on the Farm affords the Farmer's family freedom from isolation as well as protection in the absence of the men.
Mr. S. S. Lee, of Blanch, N. C., writes: "Some time ago one of our friends' husband was compelled to be off until ten o'clock at night. During that time no one was in the house but his wife. She talked to us all up and down the line, and each family was ready to go to her at a minute's notice. She said she was so glad she had a phone, as she would not feel at all lonely."

IT NOW—By Mary Chapman
"What thou doest, do quickly here was a divine command—what did it mean. If we think it over a while we draw some very profitable conclusions, and decide that we have an intention of any kind formed in our minds it is best for us to translate it into words then into action and get it done.
How many of us are playing with the thought of sin? Or, if it in more polite, less forcible language—with the thought of something that is not quite right, or on the square, or the longing for revenge against some enemy who has wronged us, or even the half formed malevolent wish that some evil will happen—we do not know ourselves what—that will make our path of life smooth for us, or rough for someone else.
With the temptation to sin, or of dishonesty. What is your grievance. What is the thing you want to do. Face the trouble like a true man—like a true woman—bring your problem into the light of day.
One or two of you, my readers, may have some evil in mind, some crime you contemplate committing but not now. Oh no, you will not go out and do it at once. You must wait for the right time and opportunity to play with the hidden evil until an occasion comes when you can do the thing as it were, without incident and then cheat your conscience into telling you "it was not your fault—you were dragged into it—temptation was strong for you."
Tell me is that your own state of mind at the present time.
Most of us have some pet idea of wrong doing that we can justify by such a strong name, or, though admitting that it is wrong, we are on the wrong side of the line of rectitude. Added to this some of us have a vague idea of a really wicked thing we should like to commit one day, at a time as I say, when we can cheat ourselves believing that we could possibly help it, or we were dragged into doing it by another. So we cherish that vague plan of sin—nurture it at the back of our minds without feeling its presence there and unseeing it grows and grows.
It feeds on our strength of will, our will grows weaker. It feeds on our cheerfulness, it feeds on our life and a shadow reads day by day like a shadow in the far background of consciousness.
Gradually our whole sky is dark, and we become trembling creatures, bemoaning our ideals, that the vapors of our own evil thinking fill our sight; destitute of faith and trust in the goodness of God and His creatures.
Then the chance we have for half guilty through weeks, months and years comes at last, what help have we? All our strength is gone. Our will is weakened by dalliance with the imagination of evil. But, help us to help ourselves. Let me repeat, if you have a half formed intention of doing something you know to be wrong, wicked, have it out with you if—do it now.
You will not. Why? You mean to do it some day, some pose when you have become sufficiently weak and futile to wish to do it without any shame or regret.
Would it not be better to get it over, and then repent with a whole heart and find your strength with the strength to condemn yourself and make amends for it again fair for the future. At that distant day when you are fully cultivated weakly, all allow you to take the path which common sense at present forbids, you will find yourself too weak to repent and atter.
Your strength of character, if you expose all frittered away, if you continue on the downward path tortured by vain remorse and hauntings of evil that cannot be shaken off yet never spur you to arise and do good instead of evil and conquer the past. Yes, you will do it some day, but why not now?
This is the question facing you if you are not squarely. Have I dragged my hidden thoughts into the light? What does it look like? Ugly, does it not?
You turn away from it with a shudder. No, you will not do it. Well, are you going to do a nasty thing away in the privacy of your mind again, and not feed it there on the best
