OWNERS OF TITANIC SEVERELY CONDEMNED

Washington, May 23.—The report of the senate committee on commerce on the investigation of the Titanic disaster, embodying a severe condemnation of the considerations under which the giant vessel was allowed to steam into her fate among the icebergs off the Newfoundland banks and recommending re-medical legislation, will be presented to the senate tomorrow.

All day the committee discussed the conclusions submitted by the sub-committee, which took the testimony in the case, and unanimously adopted its report. The report will in all probability criticize the Titanic commander and crew for the way in which the vessel was handled just preceding the collision with the iceberg and the lack of discipline displayed afterwards; the way in which White Star line officials handled the news and the lack of life boats and other equipment.

The Carpathia's commander, Captain Rostron, who went to the rescue of the Titanic, will be warmly praised, it is believed. The report will be followed by introduction of measures by Senator William Alden Smith, chairman of the sub-committee, to carry out the conclusions of the committee. Among the reforms contemplated are an inhibition against the firing of rocket signals at sea except in case of certain distress, the equipment of all ocean craft of a certain amount of passenger carrying capacity with ample lifeboats and other equipment, the furnishing of searchlights to ocean vessels, the compulsory use of binoculars by lookouts, the constant maintenance of wireless telegraph communication on all passenger vessel crossing the ocean and other steps that may be effective in the way of reforms either through legislation by Congress or by international agreement regarding ocean travel.

It is possible that a resolution of thanks will be introduced in recognition of the splendid work of Captain Rostron in rescuing so many Americans.

Broke Twenty-Year Resolution.
Wallace, Kansas, Dispatch.

Peter Robideaux has at last broken the resolution he made in 1887 to never re-open the store he then closed. It was the hardest thing Robideaux ever did to break that resolution, but his cattle were starving, while piled away in the big building were bales of hay which would keep them alive. It took two days for Robideaux to break his resolution. When he could stand the piteous lowing of the cattle no longer, he turned the rusty key in the rusty old lock, tumbled out the bales and locked the door again.

Although it has been stored away twenty years the hay was still fit to eat.

Robideaux came to Wallace early in the sixties, ahead of the claim, afterwards working on the grade. When he got enough money he opened a little store. He prospered, bought land when it was cheap, added to his stock and increased the size of his store-buildings until, in 1880, he had the largest store between Kansas City and Denver. Then came the drouth, the hot winds and hard times, and Wallace began to fade away until it was only a ghost of its former self. Robideaux's trade dropped off steadily and finally, one day in 1887, he sat from sunrise to sunset and not a person crossed the threshold of his store. That night he locked the store, turned his back on the $25,000 stock of goods within and declared he would never set foot inside it again. And Robideaux kept that resolution. Costly harness and saddles rotted away, clothing became nests of moths, groceries dried up or became prey for worms, hardware and cutlery turned to rust and still Robideaux kept his resolution. When he wanted anything he bought it some where else. Often members of his family tried to prevail upon him to sell the stock or use what part of it the family might need, but he never would. Robideaux was wealthy, owning large areas of land in this section and a well stocked ranch northeast of Wallace. When he closed the store he retired to the ranch and has lived there since.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself. Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles.—Emerson.

WILL OF MR. CALDCLEUGH.

Greensboro, May 24.—The will of the late E. M. Caldcleugh has been filed for probate in the office of the clerk of the court. Mr. G. D. Benbow is named as executor, and all property of the deceased is left in trust for the widow with the Southern Life and Trust Company as Trustee. The estate is valued at approximately $50,000. Under the terms of the will all the revenue from the property will go to the widow during her life-time or until she married again, if such an event takes place. Then it is provided that the property be sold, including the Caldcleugh mines near Thomasville, and the proceeds made to constitute a fund for the purchase of a tract of land on a public highway either in Greensboro or near the city; that not less than three acres nor more than five be purchased; that the property be made a park; that walkways be laid out, and that the land be made suitable for a public park. In the center of the park, it is provided that a mausoleum be erected along the lines of the Grant tomb in Riverside, New York, and that into this mausoleum or sepulchre, the bodies of E. M. Caldcleugh, his brother, Robert Caldcleugh, his sister, and in the case of death before marriage, the widow shall be interred. It is further provided that the park shall become the property of the city of Greensboro, and that the mayor of the city shall forever hold in custody the key to the mausoleum. The will provides that entire bulk of the property be converted into cash and expended for this purpose.

Feminine Chat And Gossip.

Every child, pretty young girl and most of their grownup sisters will want a lingerie hat as part of her summer outfit.

It matters little whether the hat itself be made of lace, embroidery or the finest of mull shirred on a wire frame it must have a garland of flowers or buds as part of the trimming.

Hats made of lace seem to require flowers of silk or satin, and since the handmade blossoms have become the fashion she who is clever with her needle will find it a pleasant task to make her own "wreath of roses" to adorn the dainty summer head covering.

Almost any bright bits of silk, satin and chiffon can be used in making buds and roses for such a wreath.

For a full sized rose a strip 18 inches long and two inches wide is required. Cut the material on the bias, and, beginning at one end fold over the satin double and draw it up into a little soft ball; then wrap the remainder of the strip around and around, working out from the center. When this is finished sew the under part fast and attach a small calyx of green ribbon. The blossoms are then attached to fine green-covered wire and foliage, formed into a garland and placed around the hat.

But what could be more appropriate for an embroidered linen than a wreath of small linen flowers? One can buy the dainty colored linens in almost every shape, one eighth of a yard being plenty to make a number of flowers. Scraps left from gowns of former years can also be used to advantage. The blossoms are made in exactly the same manner as the silk ones, using linen in its place.

In fact, dainty fabric flowers may be lawn, dimity, mull or any of the plain colored sheer summer materials.

Flowers as fine as forget-me-nots have been made of pale blue or pink mull, and nothing could be more attractive than a pretty lingerie hat trimmed with these lovely hand-made flowers.

Now is the time to make them, for it is work that can be picked up at odd moments and laid aside when other duties call.

How We Know Titanic the Way Down

There have been so many speculations as to whether the Titanic sank to the bottom of the ocean or only to a depth of a few feet, that the Scientific American deems it necessary to take the question with it. "The Titanic is not lost," and an explanation of this is certain.

There is, it says, a erroneous supposition that the density of the water is greater at the bottom than at the surface. "Density," it says, "is here confused with pressure. The pressure increases as we descend, amounting to 600 lbs. per square foot at a depth of 600 feet. Divers sometimes descend to depths of as much as 1,000 feet where the pressure is as much as 9,368.75 pounds exact. When provided with special armored diving suits have operated at depths greater than this, but approaching the depth of the Titanic now lies. The pressure at 2,000 fathoms is considerably over ten times the pressure at three-quarters of a mile per square foot. It is only natural that under such pressure the density of the water would increase, but laboratory experiments have shown that it is most impossible to compress water. At a depth of a few feet the density of sea water is greater than at the surface. With this clearly in mind is very evident that a vessel could not float at any point, but must sink to the bottom; for it could displace a greater weight of water at the bottom than at the surface. Even though the water pressure was under more than 100 atmospheres. As a matter of fact, any air-filled chamber would be crushed in by the pressure of the water. The displacement of the wreck would be growing less and less as it went down and it would fall through the water with corresponding acceleration. It must also remember that water is much more compressible than air."

Deaf College Burned

Flint, Mich., May 22.—It is estimated that it will cost close to $600,000 to rebuild the Michigan School for the Deaf in this city, that was destroyed by lightning and burned early in the morning. Among the important lessons of the institution, the work of the school, and the teaching of deaf children and teachers, who were in the main building when it broke out, were rescued, but many of the buildings were destroyed. The inmates were from 18 years of age. They were awakened by the teacher on their beds and fell in sign language of the fire. They seemed unduly excited, but were able to pick up their clothes as they were. They were immediately placed in improvised beds in the residence of Dr. Frank Clarke, superintendent of the institution, and the only building that was not burned. The principal building was the administrative building, a four-story structure, built in 1854 at a cost of $200,000, not including contents. It contained all of the offices and the records of the institution, and it is not thought that the records saved. The building was burned so rapidly that attention had been directed to the cue of the children and men teachers did valiantly in this respect.

Overcome by Grief

Savannah, Ga., May 22.—A young man, who was being held, kissing his sister tenderly, Samuel B. Jones, a well known young farmer near Acree, Ga., was killed by a lightning bolt. His death of his brother, John Jones, on Tuesday, Samuel B. Jones, was a great grief. He had been overcome by grief. He had been overcome by grief. He had been overcome by grief. He had been overcome by grief.
