Chapel Hill Items.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 12.—As to what occupations college men engage in after graduating has long since been a subject of speculative interest and thought to the people out in the state. This interest, perhaps comes from the variety of occupations that college graduates pursue on leaving the schools of higher education. The statistics as recently compiled as to the pursuits engaged in by the 1912 graduating class of the University of North Carolina furnishes interesting reading matter. Of 82 members of their present occupations is as follows: 30 are teaching, 23 of the number teaching in the public schools of the state; 11 are studying law; four are studying medicine; ten are in business; three are electrical work; two are engaged in public road engineering; four are pursuing graduate studies; two are farming; one engaged in Y. M. C. A. work; two are studying for the ministry, and two are engaged in national government service.

Professors N. W. Walker, state inspector of secondary schools, and E. K. Graham, dean of the school of liberal arts of the University, will represent the University at the sessions of the Southern Association of Colleges and Preparing Schools, which convenes at Greensboro, S. C., on November 14 and 15.

The Chamber of Commerce is erecting a church at Chapel Hill. Dr. J. C. Hays, former pastor of the First Baptist Church, is the architect in charge. The church will be a Gothic Revival style, and will be a fine addition to the city.

Albert C. Jones, who attempted to qualify as one of the pugilist bondsmen, was held on $10,000 bail on a charge of perjury after it had been shown that he had scheduled property which under the name of "A. Charles," Jones had previously had deeded to his wife. Jones was remanded to the custody of the United States marshal along with Johnson.

Catherin Dorsey at whose home the young white girl Lucille Cameron, for several weeks, was arrested this afternoon. She had hiding in a barn for three weeks. She was held under $5,000 bond as a witness in the Johnson case, and also was remanded to the marshal's custody.

At the jail door Edward F. Weigle, a newspaper photographer attempted to take a flash light picture of Johnson and the pugilist knocked him down with a heavy cane.

"I want a dozed condole, so I can have more light. A box of cigars and a case of champagne," Johnson demanded. This was refused and finally he was given a bottle of milk.

WHY WHO'S WHO

By Howard L. Rann.

One of the most interesting pieces of architecture in this country is Colonel J. Ham Lewis, of Chicago, Democracy's candidate for senator from the state of Illinois. Any way you look at him, J. Ham is a classic. Originally cast in the mold of a Greek goddess, upon entering politics he adopted the severe, Gothic style of front elevation which Chief Justice Hughes did so much to popularize.

The crowning glory of Colonel J. Ham Lewis is his whiskers. The equal of these whiskers has never been seen on man or beast. They are as full of color as a changeable silk petticoat. On a dark day when the colonel is in a quite, plastic mood, they are of a dull ruddiness, like unto the bronzed wing of a turkey gobbler. When perforated by the sun's bright ray, however, in the midst of one of J. Ham's bubbling outbursts on human rights, each whisker stands erect and throws off sparks faster than an emery wheel.

The colonel is proud of his whiskers and never lets them out of his sight. His political enemies charge him with doing them up in curl papers nightly, but this is a base libel. If the colonel could find out who started this story, he would prosecute him to the full extent of the law.

Colonel J. Ham Lewis has two peculiar habits, the other being his collection of spotted vests. The colonel has so many of these vests that he has been classified as a "vest collector." He wears to him as waistcoats and clean as soon with light-colored shirts. The two upper buttons of his Chicago residence are never in these vests, which are fastened by the effect of a magnetic force, double-breasted chestnuts.

Colonel Lewis has an income which allows him to buy pomade for his whiskers in the most recent fashion and also enables him to change vests every fifteen minutes without running out of raw material. With two such handicaps as this, how he ever got by with the plain people at a primary election will forever remain a mystery. It must be that the people overlook his vests and his whiskers and focus their eyes on the main fact that he is square.

Brilliant Triumph for Simmons.

We cordially congratulate the people of North Carolina upon their good judgement and wisdom in renominating for the United States senate its able and faithful son, Hon. F. M. Simmons, who has just been handsomely endorsed by the Democrats in the state primary had on Tuesday, the day of general election. While complete returns from the state are not yet available, it is certain that Mr. Simmons has been renominated by a majority of not less than twenty thousand, and that on the fourth of next March he will enter upon a third consecutive term in the Senate, having been elected in 1900 to succeed Marion Butler and first taken his seat in March 1901. Mr. Simmons is hopeful that his majority—meaning the excess of his vote over that of Governor Kitchin and Chief Justice Clark combined—will reach twenty-five thousand votes.

We are particularly glad of this splendid vindication of the senator by his constituency, in view of charges and assertions questioning his Democracy. The Democratic masses have approved his course, and this is no uncertain way. The re-nomination and re-election of Mr. Simmons was the wisest course the State could have taken, for his ability, reinforced by nearly a dozen years experience in the Senate makes him of peculiar value just as the Democracy is about to secure control of this branch of Congress. Being the ranking Democratic member of the Senate Committee on Finance, Mr. Simmons will become the chairman of that important committee when the Senate is reorganized next March, assuming that the Democrats will be in the majority, as now appears to be assured beyond doubt. It would have been folly to have retired a man of Mr. Simmons' long and successful experience, proved character and ability and splendid equipment for greater service just as his usefulness to his state was about to be given scope for achievement. We have consistently urged the value of experience and the folly of change in senatorships for no other or better reason than that some other man, it matters not how worthy, desired the seat and the salary.

Of Mr. Simmons' opponents in the contest for the nomination, we have nothing to say of a disparaging character. They were merely mistaken in their effort to gauge public sentiment and made a contest on the theory that the people desired a change. The people have spoken for themselves, and their voice will be convincing. Mr. Kitchin is the present governor and prior to his elevation to that office he for several terms in the House of representatives. He is a man of ability and popularity, and would doubtless make a good and useful senator, with some years of experience and the influence in the senate that experience would give. Justice Walter Clark is one of the ablest members of the North Carolina judiciary and is a man of strength and high character. Danville Register.

A Large Painting.

Columbia, S. C., November 9. (Special)—The longest painting ever executed in this country or abroad, according to authentic statements, will form a striking feature of the decorations for the educational building at the Fifth National Corn Exposition here next January. The canvas for this immense painting will be nearly a sixth of a mile in length, by nine feet wide. It will extend entirely around the big steel building which will house the exhibits from the department of agriculture and the thirty or more states which will enter the Exposition. The canvas will cover about 7,500 square feet of space and 533 pounds of dry paints will be necessary in the executive of the work.

The artist who will transform this material into a mammoth work of art is Mr. E. E. Sprague of Columbus, Ohio, who executed a somewhat similar, though smaller, piece of work for the Fourth Exposition. Mr. Sprague is now a resident of Columbia and is beginning upon his huge task. The canvas will be divided into thirty or more spaces, into which will be painted landscape scenes typical of the states whose exhibits will be arranged below.

Exhibits of the highest class are being secured for the Exposition, and it is the purpose to place them in an artistic setting of corresponding high quality. Floral decorations will also contribute to this effect.

O. F. Crowson Retires as Editor of The Durham Sun.

Durham, Nov. 10.—The Durham Daily Sun will say tomorrow. "The stock of the Publishing Company has been purchased by S. J. Flickinger and Walter W. Weaver, who took charge of the paper today. Mr. Flickinger was formerly with the Associated press and later editor of the Dayton (Ohio) Blade." The present Sun force will be retained for a while at least. Mr. W. N. Keener, will be editor temporarily. Mr. Weaver will be business manager, and Mr. Flickinger will be general manager. Mr. Crowson who has been the able editor to his home in Burlington, where he will engage in other business.

Fourteen Lives Are Lost Many Hurt in Bad Train Wreck

New Orleans, La., Nov. 11.—Fourteen lives were snuffed out and 90 passengers injured when a through freight crashed into the rear end of a north bound excursion train on the Yazoo and Mississippi valley railroad near Montz, La., at 12:20 this morning.

The appalling disaster is charged by the railroad officials to the negligence of a flagman named Cunningham who disappeared when the two trains crashed together.

Of the dead four are white women, one a white infant, four negro women and five negro men.

Forty one of the injured are white and forty nine negroes. It is expected that all of these except possibly three, will recover.

Although the scene of the wreck is but 27 miles north of New Orleans and relief trains were sent from this city and from Baton Rouge, the railroad officials withheld from the press information of the wreck until a late hour this morning.

An amazing feature of it was that the loss of life was confined almost entirely to the last and fourth from the last coaches of the excursion train. The second from the last coach escaped injury almost completely. The excursion train was made up of 10 coaches.

The rear coach was demolished and the third and fourth cars were telescoped. All three together with the freight engine were burned.

Pathetic stories of the gastly horror were brought to New Orleans today by survivors, many of whom barely escaped death. The confusion confused and excitement accident to the distressing scenes of death and suffering was increased by the cries and exclamations of the hundreds of negroes who ran about in a sanic stricken condition.
