Mrs. Lena Hall Isley Entertained Faculty.

Saturday evening from eight thirty to eleven at her home on Park Avenue Mrs. Lena Hall Isley entertained in honor of the faculty of the Burlington school. The hall and parlor were tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. The reception committee consisted of Mrs. Isley who introduced the guest to the faculty. One of the chief amusements of the evening was progressive rook, seven tables being necessary to accommodate the large number present. While the guest were being entertained refreshments consisting of cake and cream were served. Those so fortunate as to be present were:

Misses Margaret Hall, of Raleigh; Louise Hines of Winston-Salem; Benbow, Hines, McDaniel, Bulla, Underwood, Dailey, Carroll, Bingham, Simpson, Robertson, Ward, Ellis, Lashley and Freeman, Mrs. C. A. Smith and Messrs. C. A. Walker, D. J. Walker, Loyd, Anderson, Dameron, Isley Sharpe, McNeerney, Woodhull and Barnwell.

THE TEETH

By Dr. J. E. Hoyt

Decay of the teeth is not a disease which has its origin in modern methods of living for toothache, with its pangs, dates back as far as history can be traced, and never has the human race suffered so universally from any other malady as it has from dental disorders.

Until recently the real cause of tooth decay was not known. Many theories were advanced but none were generally accepted until Dr. John W. Brown, after many experiments, first made the announcement that he had discovered the decay of the teeth is chiefly due to the formation of bacteria between and on the teeth, as a result of improper food and irregularity of food left on the teeth.

Now, it is possible to prevent tooth decay by the use of a special preventive tooth powder, which kills the bacteria, and keeps the teeth healthy.

Brush your teeth carefully and clean your mouth with this preventive tooth powder. It is a very important part of your dental hygiene. It is a very important part of your dental hygiene. It is a very important part of your dental hygiene.

The dentist having a good share of the work, it is necessary that you do your part. Your part is to keep your teeth clean and healthy. Your part is to keep your teeth clean and healthy. Your part is to keep your teeth clean and healthy.

Teeth decay very little during the day, as there is a large amount of saliva present which dilutes any acid almost as soon as formed. At night when we are asleep, the salivary glands are at rest and there is very little saliva present in the mouth. If the surface of the teeth are covered with food, it will ferment during the night and the resulting acid not being diluted by the saliva will cause decay.

Hence it is important to remove the food from your teeth before retiring, by brushing them, using tooth paste, powder or liquid.

Try this method of preserving your teeth, and you will find it preserves your appearance and improve your health.
