angels. CHURCH HOSPITALITY (Charity and Children.) A young men told us of an expe ience he had some time since in a forth Carolina town that is well worth relating. He struck the town m Tuesday and being a K. of P., atended the lodge on Tuesday night. the brethren, all of whom were trangers, extended a warm welcome nd expressed their pleasure at hevng him with them. They also told im where they could be found and ordially invited him to call at their laces of business the next day. That vas fine and brotherly, and gave the tranger a good impression of the own. The next evening he attended the prayer-meeting at the Baptist church. There were from seventyive to one hundred persons present out not a soul paid any more attention to him that if he had been a ost. Not one hand was extended to him in kindly greeting; not one brotherly word was spoken. He left the church as much of a stranger as he entered it. This was un-Christian gave the stranger a bad impression of the church. He has attended that same church frequently since then, and after forcing himself on the brethren found them very pleasant eople. Is this case unusual? Are any other churches in North Caroina guilty of the same offense? If this young man had not been too big to take offense he would probably ever have darkened the door again. It is not much trouble to speak to a tranger, and nobody knows how nuch it may mean. Our churches should cultivate the spirit of hospitality. A hand-shake from the pasor is not enough. Many good people as hospitable and warm-hearted at their homes as they can be are as cold as a stone at the church. Right at this point the Seminary might put in some good work. The young preachers should be taught the impor tance of training their people in the grace of church hospitality. Many of our churches have lost immensely by giving the cold shoulder to strangers within their gates. The church is one place where formal introductions are ot necessary. It is not only proper, it is duty, to walk right up to a stranger in your church, tell him who you are, shake his hand in protherly fashion, and tell him you are glad to see him. And this is not the exlusive duty of the deacons, either. It is a duty that belongs to all and t is more becoming and more highly appreciated in people who are not onsidered "prominent" in the affairs of the church. It should be in the Preaching every First and Third Sabhath at 11:00 A. M., and S:00 P. M. atmosphere and strangers should feel
