This is Newspaper Week

WHAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, GOVERNOR BROUGHTON AND THE EDITOR HAVE TO SAY ABOUT IT

This is newspaper week throughout the country, a week set apart for calling the attention of the people to the incalculable value of a free press as one of the foundations of all American institutions.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S WORDS

"The recurrence of national newspaper week should awaken in the hearts and souls of all Americans a renewed determination to defend and maintain and perpetuate the priceless heritage of a free press.

"The maintenance of an unfettered press, informed by truth and guided by courage and conscience and wholehearted devotion to the public welfare, is a fundamental obligation of patriotism.

"I trust as a result of the forthcoming observance that Americans everywhere will have a renewed sense of the incalculable blessing which a free press confers. It must be maintained against all assaults."

GOVERNOR BROUGHTON FOLLOWS UP

Urging North Carolinians to join in the observance, the chief executive called it "an effort of the greatest significance."

"It comes at a time when the freedom of the press and freedom of speech are more strictly limited and restricted throughout the earth than at any time in modern history," he said. "These rights . . . will be enhanced and fortified by an adequate observance of this important period set apart as newspaper week."

"Not only do the newspapers of the land exemplify this guaranty of the freedom of the press, but likewise they have a tremendous part in maintaining and keeping alive those other heritages guaranteed by the constitution, including the freedom to worship God according to the individual choice. It is essential to democracy that we have a free press. Jefferson, the greatest of our apostles of democracy, put a free press as essential to all other freedoms and to democracy itself.

"An informed press is one of the great bulwarks of the people. In any democracy the people on the street must be well informed if democracy is to work and endure; and the press and the radio constitute the only means of keeping our citizens up with what is going on.

"The converse of this is of course true; it has been demonstrated that the first step of dictators is always to clamp down on the freedom of the press and freedom of worship. At the present moment it is true that only on the American continent do the workers and the housewife and citizen generally have the privilege of reading about the world and its events and about their neighbors without the obscuring touch of a censor's pencil."

THE WAY THE READERS CAN STAND BY A FREE PRESS

We never know the value of our greatest blessings until we are deprived of them. Freedom of the press, freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of assembly are the foundation stones of American greatness. Never before has there been a time when the people of the country should more fully understand and appreciate their value.

It is particularly true in relation to the local newspapers. The local newspaper is the lungs of the community through which the breath of life pulsates. Any community which has no local newspaper as its mouthpiece, its clearing house for all the best of the community, is indeed a poor place.

The local newspaper is not a money making institution, nor is it a charitable institution. It is both a business enterprise and a public institution. It can be useful only as it helps and interprets its people. It can exist as a business enterprise only by the support it is given in subscriptions and advertising. These are paid for in money of the realm, for value received. But in addition to value received by advertisers and subscribers, there is a large surplus of benefit to the community. As said, no community can long exist and hold its youth and enterprise without it.

Clearly, the way that the people can show their interest and the value they place upon a free press is by giving it business support. Pay your subscription and renew promptly.

The Weekly has a large number of subscribers on its lists whose subscriptions now need renewing. Fall in with the purpose of newspaper week by sending your renewals. Every subscriber should at the very least renew promptly. And during newspaper week every one who sends a dollar for his own subscription may have the privilege of sending the Weekly one year to some friend complimentary. Send your own name and the address of your friends.
