LOCAL AND GENERAL.

Cold winter weather. Christmas is three weeks off.

The Wadesboro fair is week after next.

Three big festivals already reported for Christmas week.

Didn't so many turkeys die on Thanksgiving day after all.

The conference of the Zion church adjourned at Statesville last Monday to meet next November in Morgantown.

The Eastern North Carolina conference met in Wilmington last Wednesday.

There is still talk of building street car lines in our city.

The Wadesboro fair comes off week after next; the 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th.

As things are a little dull in the social world we suggest the reorganization of the literary circle.

Eugene Partee gives us some of the old lady's advice to the girls in poetry. Read it.

Our Columbia letter and our Washington letter are delayed this week. We are sorry, as we held space for them.

Biddle University now has about two hundred students and they are coming in daily.

On last Sunday night we visited the Presbyterian church. Rev. Mr. Wyche, the pastor preached an interesting sermon from Genesis X—1.

On last Sunday Rev. W. J. Moore filled the pulpit in Clinton Chapel, morning and night. He took for a subject: "Happy is that people whose God is the Lord."

Rev. T. T. B. Reed, of New York, preached in Clinton Chapel on Thanksgiving night, from Isaiah, 53—10. Mr. Reed is on his way from conference to Manchester, where he is to preach next year. He is an intelligent and interesting preacher and prepared to do much good among our people. He is also a short-hand writer, and was one of the secretaries at the conference. We learn he got down some of the brethren's sermons a little too correct. He is the second colored stenographer we know of in the State.

Santa Claus.

As we have been requested by several little children to publish letters to Santa Claus, we will for their special benefit, give them space in next week, or week after next. Any little children having letters to publish, may send them in at any time.

CITY NEWS OF THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, 26th.—Elder W. J. Moore filled Rev. Tyler's pulpit.—There was a small fire in the afternoon on 2d street. No damage.—A colored man named Will Crosswell was detected, on Sunday night, trying to open Hayes & McGinn's store. He is in jail.

MONDAY, 27th.—The Mayor had several cases, but it seems took in only $10.

TUESDAY, 28th.—The Air-Line train that went out Tuesday morning, jumped the track below Greenville, but no serious damage was done.—Humpty Dumpty showed on Tuesday night, to the usual crowd.

WEDNESDAY, 29th.—The R. & D. pay train came in and rejoiced many hearts.—Amzi Russell had the misfortune to split one of his feet open while cutting wood. Dr. Wilder sewed it up.—Some thief entered Mrs. Sander's boarding house and stole Dr. Simmons Jones' overcoat with two cases of surgical instruments.—A room on College street was entered and Andy Barnes was robbed of $34, $7 of which belonged to another man.

THURSDAY, 30th.—This being Thanksgiving day the stores were generally closed up and services held at the different churches.—A good many men went gunning as usual.—The brass band came out and played in front of the Central and the Buford House.—There was generally good order and little drunkenness on the streets.

Death of General Tyler. NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—General Daniel Tyler died last night. He was born in 1799, graduated from West Point in 1819. He went to France, studied the methods of light artillery and on his return his drawings were adopted by the government. He resigned from the army in 1835 and re-entered during the rebellion, was second in command at the battle of Bull Run, and during the war was a member of the bureau of engineering. He quit active service in 1864 and then built several railroads in the North and South, and was interested in several factories in Anniston, Alabama. From 1873 to '78 he was President of the Mobile and Montgomery R R Co. The General leaves five children, Mrs Alex Moore, of Texas, Mrs Chas Carrow, of this city, Alfred L Tyler, of Alabama, Augustus C Tyler, of Connecticut and Edward L Tyler, of New York. These were present at their father's death. The funeral will take place on Saturday, but the final interment will be at Anniston, Ala. The deceased leaves an estate valued at $250,000.

Grandma's Counsel to the Girls.

BY W. E. PARTEE.

An old lady sat in her great armchair, With cheerful countenance and silver'd hair; Shrouded in silence, and dreaming o'er Things of the past that would come no more; Best awaited her in mansions above, Rich in experience, she sends for her girls To tell them how to get on in the world.

In came the girls, a jovial band, Each grasping warmly her withered hand; Always glad to meet her, and glad to hear Her words of counsel and words of cheer. Seeing that her head is silver'd o'er, Fain would they honor her all the more; As they seat themselves near by her side, She gives this counsel with feelings of pride.

"Never look upon work as something mean, It is elevating, as is easily seen. Remember you must sometime superintend A place where love and labor must blend. So take hold girls and cook for mother, Learn to make garments for little brother; Step out bravely and ply the broom, Mother may grow ill very soon."

"Then how pleasant it is to show Those around you how well you know How to fill her place 'till your pretty cheeks glow With a radiance which labor alone can bestow. When wedded and placed in a home of your own, You'll be glad that you can fill that home In a way to awaken a love so sweet, As can only be felt where two souls meet."

"If servants you have you must learn to direct; To perceive their faults, their errors to correct. Make yourself useful in every way, Labor cheerfully from day to day. You must be worthy if you've learned to toil And never feel afraid your hands to soil. The greatest woman the world ever knew, Showed herself noble by what she could do."

"Then your admirers may cluster round, From valley and plain, from grove and town; Some may come with a wish to wed, So weigh and remember each word that's said. Put on no false colors, but hold up the true, And that leads them to be honest too; Firmly decline to deceive no man, Be just as firm and true as you can."

"Beware of the dandy of little brain, Spurn him as chaff and seek pure grain: Trust him not, though fine his coat, He lives only to flirt, and sport. Tell him as far as wooing is concerned, A right to your attentions he has never earned. Discard him at once, and off he will go Determined to become a better man, I know."

"Never let a man lavish money on you In rides, and costly presents, as they oftimes do. Be careful how much for you he spends, Knowing that to make him poorer it tends. Speak to him boldly, and fear not to say You may need a bit of this money some day; In this, as in other things, be wise, You will seem far worthier in his eyes."

"An influence you will surely exert, Its silent power you cannot avert; Be careful to use it for good and right, To lead mankind out of darkness into light. You may never know the power you possess, 'Till you enter the haven of peace and rest, To turn men from crime, to make them good, You can make earth a heaven if you only would."

"Cultivate sympathy, and ever feel Ready to soothe a sorrow, a wound to heal; Each one you bless, erects within his breast, A monument to your memory that tells in heaven; Though lightly they think of it when you're here, Relax not; let it cause no sigh or tear; Your crown with stars, the angels will adorn, And earth miss you sadly when you're gone."

Have a sweet voice and sunny face; With light and joy fill many a place; If ever so weak, you can do thus much, Try to brighten every life you touch. Be all that is good and noble and pure, Be clothed with holiness; for I am sure, A more beautiful thing, we can never behold, 'Till we pass the portal of lustrous gold.

State Appointments in Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 1.—The following appointments have been made; Ahmed Vefy K Pasha, prime minister, Aarifi Pasha, President of the Council of State, Munir Bey, formerly financial comptroller of the province of Broussa, to be minister of finance and Hussein Hasui Pasha, minister of war.

The Langtry Craze.

The sale of seats for Mrs Langtry's engagement at the Globe Theatre, Boston, commenced Tuesday morning, and all the desirable seats in the house for the opening night were rapidly sold, principally to speculators. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed that speculators should have been permitted to buy so heavily. The management, however, would not seem to be responsible, as ticket-buyers began to get in line at the box office at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, and remained there all day and all night until the sale of tickets began at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning.
