rough panel and rotten posts and rusted latch when there are twelve gates and they are "A great many of the churches in this day are being doctrined to death. They have been trying to find out all about God's de-crees, and they want to know who are elected to be saved and who are reprobated to be dammed, and they are keeping on discussing that subject when there are millions of souls who need to have the truth put straight at them. They sit counting the number of teeth in the jawhone with which Samson alew the Philistines. They sit on the beach and asee a vessel going to pieces in the offing, and instead of getting into a boat and pulling for the wreck they sit discussing the different styles of carlocks. God un-tended us to know some things and intended us not to know others. I have heard scores of sermons explanatory of God's decrees, but came away more perplexed then I went. The only result of such discussion is a great fog. Here are two truths which are to conquer the world: man, a sinner: Christ, a savior. Any man who adopts these two theories in his religious belief shall have my right hand in warm grip of Christian brotherhood. A man comes down to a river in time of my charities, and, having done so many up to get my reward. A voice from within says: 'I never knew you.' An-other great crowd comes up and they try to get through. They say: 'We were highly honorable on earth and the earth howed very lowly before us. We were hon-ornors in heaven.' And a yoice from within is ays: 'I never knew you.' Another crowd advances and says; 'We were very and we come up to get appropriate recogni-tion.' A voice answers: 'I never knew you.' "After a while I see another throng ap-moder in the gate and eas same to be spoke-mar for all the rest, aithough their voices were and anon cry ameni ameni. This one thase come up to this place not because I do save come up to this place not because I do save come up to this place not because I do save and they pass in and they surround the throne and the cry is: 'Worthy is the finds that was slain to receive power and be division and streight and honor as al door and streight and honor as al door and the try is: 'Worthy is the share throne and the cry is: 'Worthy is the share throne and the cry is is when the very al door and they pass in and they surround the throne and the crys is 'Worthy is the share the state. ### A California Fruit Ranch.

A California Fruit Ranch. The life on a large ranch is uneventful but pleasant, says a letter from Southern California to the New York Post. This of ours contains nearly 800 acres, and produces oranges, lemons, grapes, olives, and apricots. It extends up the Santa Paula Canon nearly a mile, and reaches southward to the edge of the country road that runs through the valley. West-ward the property lies along the side of a gently sloping hill for a distance of nearly two miles. The original bounda-rices of the ranch were once much more extended than now. Then the property embraced all the land that at present is occupied by the village, and reached across the river to the opposite range of of mountains. But there was too much land then, and the surplus was sold at different times, the money received for it being used in improving the acres that were retained. Parts of the ranch are still uncultivated, and are used for pasturing a few sheep and fancy catle. The vinevard is small. the ranch are still uncultivated, and are used for pasturing a few sheep and fancy cattle. The vineyard is small, and so is the olive patch; but the orange and lemon orchards cover 200 acres of ground, and are at present just in their prime. Wagon loads of the lus-cious fruits are sent off every day to Ven-tura, where they are sold or shipped, and the rounded trees add rich masses of deep green color to the landscape. The the rounded trees add rich masses of deep green color to the landscape. The oranges hanging from the bending boughs gleam through the foliage like lumps of gold. In the morning before breakfast we visit the grove, and reaching up, pluck what fruit we want. There is no comparison between the taste of a freshly pluck what fruit we want. There is no comparison between the taste of a freshly picked orange and that of one bought at a shop. We have been taught how to eat the orange too. Instead of peeling and quartering it, thus getting the pulp with the juice, we pare it as we do an apple and then eat around the core. In this way the pulp is not taken into the mouth, and we get nothing but tender particles. The best among us consume half-a-dozen oranges at a time in this manner, and the youngest can safely at-tack at least three. The trees are now in bloom, but with the blossoms there is always fruit. Each tree yields from 1,000 to 2,000 oranges. to 2,000 oranges.

The Law of the Road.

The Law of the Road. Many drivers of heavily loaded vehicles seem to think that all lightly loaded ones should turn out and give them all the traveled part of the road. As is well ex-pressed by Burton W. Potter, in his little handbook, "The Road and the Roadside," "No doubt a lightly-loaded vehicle can often turn out with less convenience than a heavily loaded one, and generally every thoughtful and considerate driver of a light vehicle is willing to, and does, give the heavy vehicle more than half the road on every proper occasion; but the driver of the heavy vehicle ought to understand that it is done out of courtesy to him-self and consideration for his horses, and not because it is required by any rule of self and consideration for his horses, and not because it is required by any rule of law. The statute law of the road in most States makes no distinction between the lightly and the heavy loaded vehicles. Both alike are required to pass to the right of the traveled part of the road. In case of accident the court would un-doubtedly take into consideration the size and load of each vehicle as bearing upon the equestion of the conduct of the size and load of each vehicle as bearing upon the question of the conduct of the driver under the circumstances, and their responsibility would be settled in ac-cordance with the law of the road,' modified and possibly reversed by the situation of the parties and the circum-tances surrounding them at the time."

Song Birds Boarding Out.

The following notice, posted in the window of a bird store in New York, re-cently, attracted the attention of a Mail and Express reporter:

..... Birds Boarded by the Week or Month.

He stepped in to investigate. The person in charge of the establishment ex-plained that a regular branch of the busi-ness consisted in caring for song birds and other feathered pets, belonging to families who had arranged to pass the summer months out of town. Hundreds of birds of all sizes, colors and species made the place a wilderness of discord as they screamed, chattered, warbled or sang, all in different keys. About fifty of the prisoners were boarders; the others were offered for sale. "Before another month passes by," said the at-tendant, "we shall have a hundred birds boarding here, for then, almost every-body who can afford it, will have made arrangements to go to the country, if not body who can afford it, will have made arrangements to go to the country, if not to Europe. When they go away they leave their dogs in charge of the coach-man, except the toy dogs, which are taken along when possible. The cat is left behind to shift for himself, but the

if we have a good many customers. We charge 50 cents for mocking birds, which are choice in their food, and the same sum for parrots. Say we have sixty reg-ular boarders the season round, and average the day at 30 cents each, we have average the day at 30 cents each, we have $18 per week coming in, and $12 of this is clear profit. But our customers, who are usually wealthy ladies, often insist on paying tenfold the amount of our bill. The owner of this mocking-bird gave me $20 for caring for it duing the next two months." months.

$20 for earing for it duing the next two months." A carriage had just rolled up to the door and a young lady in costly garb alighted, attended by a man-servant in livery. She bore in her hand a gilled cage. "I have brought you this bad boy again," she said, lightly, "and if any-thing goes wrong with him write me at once to this address." When birds are removed from richly furnished boudoirs of their fair owners to a noisy store they become at first moody, and in some ir-stances even decline to take food, but gradually they accept the situation and appear to like the company.

who might be cured. Thickening of the membrane which lines the nesal passages, thus making breathing difficult; a discharge from the nostrils, more or less copious, watery or thick, according to the stage of the disease; a sense of fullness in the head; a constant inclination to spit; and, in advanced cases, a dropping of intensely disgusting matter into the threat, are a few of the prominent symptoms of Catarrh. Deafness, inflamed eyes, neuralgic pains, sore throat and a loss of sense of smell, are very often caused by Catarrh. All these troubles are cured by Piso's Rem-dy for Catarrh. Relief is had immediately faiter beginning its use, but it is important that it be continued without intermission until the catarrhal virus is expelled from the system and healthy secretions replace the diseased action of the mucous membrane. Manifestly it is unreasonable to expect a cure in a short time of a disease that has been progressing for months or years. This question of time is provided for in the putting up of Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. It is so concentrated that a very small dose is sufficient for a long treatment, consequently the expense is a mere trifle, and there is no cures for neglect nor reason for it but for-getfulness. ### Danger from Foul Earth.

As to the advisability of filling ravines and lots with street refuse mixed more or less with garbage, there is serious question. To a certain extent it can be safely done; but when the filling is car-ried up so near the desired level that only a thin shell of presentable earth can be placed on top of the rubbish, the buried filth becomes a source of dauger. buried filth becomes a source of danger. Being of a porous and spongy nature, it in time becomes saturated with organic matter through the leaking of sewers and vaults; and wherever a house is built on the filled premises the excavation for the cellar cuts through the crust and afthe cellar cuts through the crust are at-fords ventilation for the subterranean nastiness. That death and disease should immediately occupy new houses upon lots so filled should occasion no surprise. Re-cently, at Chicago, almost an entire family was swept away by malignant disease that was afterward shown to have been caused by exhalations from the cellar, the floor of which was nothing less thau a spongy mass of filth, the entire lot on which the house stands having been filled with refuse from streets and back-yards. with refuse from streets and back-yatter. This danger from promiscuous filling may serve to reconcile taxpayers to the expense of dump scows for lake work when their use shall become necessary.— Hall's Journal of Health.
