

WHY THE BOILER BURSTS.

Scientific Explanation of Some Phenomena of the Kitchen. When you hear the kitchen boiler cracking, there is no cause for alarm. There is a prevailing impression that the cracking is produced by steam and that there is therefore an increased pressure on the boiler at such times. But this is an error. If the boiler is in good condition, with the water turned on as usual so that the boiler is kept filled, the only pressure that it is subjected to is the same as that in the water pipes, from which of course there never is the slightest danger. And this is true no matter how hot the water in the boiler may be.

The reason is very simple. As long as the boiler is kept full of water there is no room for steam. If you open the hot water cock, the water pours out, and steam rises from it, because it then has a chance to escape into the air. In other words, evaporation takes place. But as the hot water pours out from the pipes rushes in to take its place, and thus the boiler is kept full. The cracking noise referred to is heard when the water is unusually hot and is nothing but the expansion of the boiler under the influence of that heat. It is in no degree an indication of danger unless indeed the boiler is worn out or defective, which is a matter entirely outside of what we are now considering.

When a kitchen boiler explodes, it is generally because a fire has been kindled in the range while the boiler was empty. It happens sometimes when people come back to town after spending the summer away. The fire heats the boiler, of course, and when the water is turned on it is converted suddenly and violently into steam, and the boiler cannot stand the enormous pressure. Fortunately few persons are thoughtless enough or silly enough to build a fire before opening the cocks connecting the boiler with the water pipes.—Chicago Chronicle.

HOTEL KLEPTOMANIACS.

Presumably Rich Guests Who Appropriated Other People's Property. I was much struck with the habits of kleptomaniacs common to some of the presumably rich visitors who engaged expensive suits of rooms and even paid their bills. After the departure of these guests the bed would be found minus the satin or silk coverlet, white towels and pillowslips were also very often removed.

On one occasion a gentleman engaged a double room for one night only, and the following morning the maid, knowing of his departure, made up the bed with fresh linen for the next occupant. However, the visitor had evidently returned to his room after breakfast, deliberately taken the slips off the pillows and packed them with his luggage, for on entering the room shortly after I found the bed made up, but no slips. I happened to know that the maid had certainly put fresh ones on when she made up the bed. What that gentleman could want with these two pillowslips is difficult to understand.

Of course candles, matches and soap (supplied gratis) are commonly removed, and even the sheets on the beds are not spared. Once a large double sheet was cut into pieces, the visitor evidently requiring sufficient linen for a petticoat or lining to a skirt, judging from the shape of the pieces left. The hotel sheet was no doubt the nearest thing available, so it was taken to save time and trouble, and the pieces left were found carefully rolled up and thrown into a cupboard outside the room which was only used by the maids and strictly private. Needless to say, before the remains of the sheet were found the visitors had departed, leaving no address.—Chambers' Journal.

The Colors of Eels.

The eel is very unpopular with many people; but, like many unpopular things, he improves with acquaintance. In form he is long, slender and graceful, in color dark green above and yellowish white below. Many believe that there are two distinct varieties, the salt and the fresh water eel, but I am inclined to think that, like all other fishes, the eel partakes much of the nature of his surroundings. A long summer vacation in a pond or brook renders him darker in color, and daily feasting on landlocked delicacies renders him more corpulent.

Just so codfish take on the color of their habitat, gray when on muddy bottom, bright red when living among kelps and gay colored marine plants. I believe, too, that the eel often forgets to return to salt water, but never breeds elsewhere, for I have never seen baby eels in brooks or ponds. I have known them to be taken every month in the year in the same localities. Some say that half the eels spend the winter in fresh water, coming down in the spring, and that the other half go up for the summer.

Not Given to Squandering.

Justice—You say that you doubt the statement of the previous witness that the defendant squandered his inheritance. Please give the reason for your doubt. Witness—I tried three or four times to get him to visit a church fair, but it was useless. He always smiled and informed me that he was not born yesterday.—Boston Transcript.

The Chinese are not entirely clothed in cotton. The ordinary annual crop of silk in China is estimated at about 21,000,000 pounds, of which over 60 per cent is consumed in the country where it is produced.

Shot and Killed by Accident.

Asheville Citizen. Last evening about 8:30 Tax Lister R. J. Stokely received a telegram from T. B. Bedillon of Sewickley, Pa., stating that Mr. Stokely's son, Arthur, had accidentally shot himself and that the wound was serious. About two hours later he received a message conveying the sad intelligence that the wound had resulted fatally. Young Stokely in company with Charles Nichols, the 18 years old son of John A. Nichols, left here about three weeks ago. The boys went direct from here to Pittsburg, and at Sewickley, Stokely secured a position which he was filling at the time of the accident.

It is not known where young Nichols is, although it is reported he is at a small city near Pittsburg. How the shooting occurred is not known as the message simply stated that Arthur was accidentally shot. The receipt of the sad news completely prostrated his parents, Mrs. Stokely being compelled to take her bed upon being told of her son's death. Arthur was the oldest child. He was 18 years of age. He was a very bright boy and his life was a promising one. He was a student at the high school here the past season and was well liked by both his teachers and fellow schoolmates. The body will be interred at Sewickley for the present at least. The Mr. Bedillon who sent the note is a former resident of Asheville and it is supposed young Stokely was staying at his house.

The Weather.

Forecast for North Carolina from Washington, D. C., for tonight and Friday: Showers tonight and Friday, cooler Friday. Fresh to brisk southeast to south winds. Notes: A trough of low pressure extends from the Lake Region to Mexico this morning, causing unsettled conditions and rain in that belt, and thence eastward to the coast. An area of high pressure has moved from the Pacific to the northwest, attended by a decided fall in temperature. Light frost occurred in Nebraska last night. Showers were general yesterday in the Mississippi Valley and in the Gulf States; they were heavy in parts of Texas, Mississippi and Illinois. Showers are probable in this vicinity tonight and Friday. The weather will be cooler by Friday night. G. R. OBERHOLER Official in Charge.

What's the Use.

What's the use, some one will ask, of raising pure-bred fowls instead of common chickens? We answer by asking what is the use of raising Jersey cows instead of piney-woods scrub stock, or what is the use of raising Essex hogs instead of razor-backs, or thoroughbred horses instead of marsh tackeys. One has only to look over the mongrel flocks of chickens at home and at the homes of his neighbors, and then at the pure-bred fowls in the chicken show for an answer. There is symmetry of form, beauty of plumage and increase in weight. Such chickens are a delight to the eye, even if there were not a single other advantage.—Augusta Chronicle.
