The News is Now Printed On Its New Twelve Page Press

Latest Wonder in Flat Bed Newspaper Presses Installed in Our Pressroom, Giving Great Additional Facilities and Advantages---Will Turn Out 5000 Twelve-page Papers an Hour---The News Will Now be Able to Handle Its Tremendous and Ever Increasing Business With Neatness and Promptness.

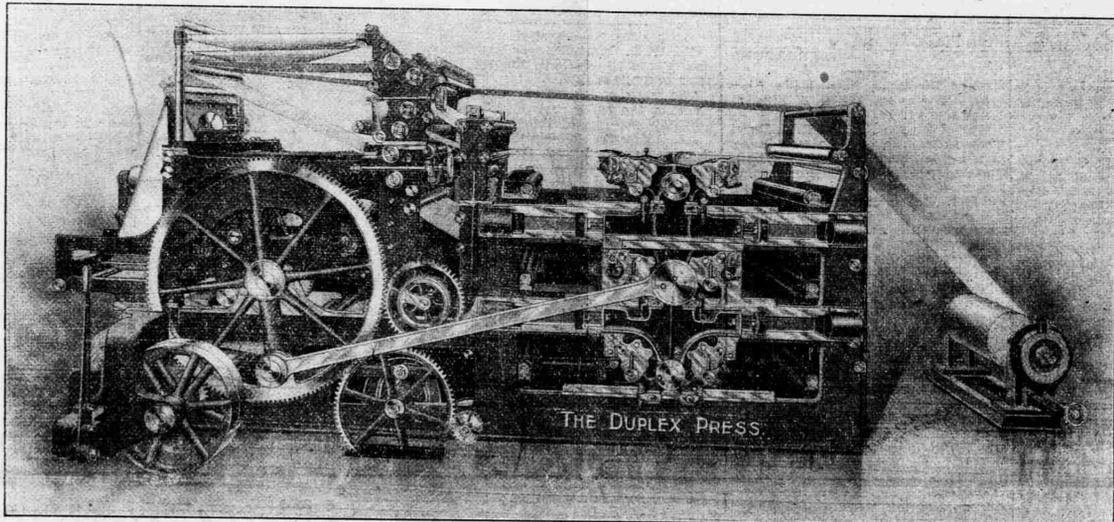

The News has completed the installation and is now being printed on what it considers by all odds the best newspaper press ever brought to North Carolina.

The press is a Duplex Flat Bed Web Press, and will print a paper of from two to twelve pages at the rate of 5000 to 6000 per hour. It enables us to increase the size of The News and The Times-Democrat on short notice from 8 pages to 10 and 12 pages, thus permitting us to handle the large advertisements so frequently demanded by our merchants and at the same time give an abundance of reading matter.

The press weighs twenty tons. It stands about eight feet in height, about 17 feet in length and is about seven feet across.

Its operation is a little less than a wonder to those people who are not accustomed to the workings of present day printing machinery. The News extends a cordial invitation to all its friends both in and out of town to call and examine the plant.

Technically the new press is known as a "flat bed Web Perfecting Press." It is a flat bed because the forms from which the paper is printed rest on flat beds. By the term "Web Press" is meant that the paper used is a continuous web being fed from a huge roll and not from sheets. And the term "perfecting press" means that a perfect paper on his way to Glarus, Switzerland, to erect similar presses for his company. Our readers may form some idea of the magnificent machine we have installed when we say that the Paris edition of the New York Herald is printed on two of these presses. They are in use in leading offices in every State in the union and in most foreign countries.

turning, one portion running horizontally on bars which cannot be seen, the other diagonally up to its place in the folder. To the right of the picture is shown the triple-decked printing mechanism. The paper from this roll is 35 inches wide and is carried through the press at a rate of speed faster than the walk of the average man, yet the tension is so exactly adjusted that the delicate ribbon of paper is pushed on and on by automatic fingers without breaking until it is cut off into perfect copies of The News.

box and sees with what swiftness the papers are delivered. A detailed and comprehensive description of such a press as the new Duplex is scarcely possible. Of intricate appearance, it is extremely simple in operation. The "Angle Bars," which carry one-half of the paper under the other after it is printed and just before it is carried down the "Former" to the folder, and also the sliding rollers which control the slack of the paper during the moment of impression by the cylinders passing over the forms, are veritable wonders of mechanism and they can only be understood by observation.

is made in a single operation, complete in every detail. This is the interpretation of the technical name, Flat-bed Web Perfecting Press. The process of printing takes place altogether at one end of the press. Here are situated the three horizontal beds already mentioned, on which the pages of type are placed. Moving backward and forward over these beds are three impression cylinders mounted on reciprocating crossheads and carrying rollers to guide the web and inking rollers. The press prints a newspaper with every half revolution of the driving wheel; half the pages being printed on the lower bed while the paper is passing to the right, and half on the upper bed as the web passes round towards the folder. There is thus left an interval for the ink to dry between the impressions on a given paper of the lower cylinder and that of the upper. For the supply of ink there are six ink fountains.

now travel together, over the V-shaped former, which practically makes the second fold. The printed web, now brought to single page size, passes through the short cutting cylinder which sever each complete paper from the web. The third fold tucker blade strikes this on the center of the page, and instantly it has the three fold made in it and is speeding on to the third fold delivery. But, if, while this is on its way to the third fold delivery, the operator desires the further, or mailing fold, he touches a button and the paper is stopped in its swift course, and the heretofore idle fourth fold tucker blade strikes it at right angles with the third fold, and it drops between the pair of short rolls and comes out at the fourth fold packing ready for delivery. An ingenious little machine automatically counts the papers as they are delivered in either packer.

The garnishee proceeding was in Florida, notwithstanding Deer was a resident of Alabama and the Alabama trial court held the Florida court to be without jurisdiction and the railroad company to be liable. The company resisted payment and appealed from one court to another until it reached the highest.
