POOR ME.

Poor me! I have done the best I could. Or think I have done the best—Which means, that my will to do was good.

Poor Me! I have gone about, about, And run in a little round. I thought I moved in the world without.

There were some (I know) who loved me well (Oh, they loved were I least deserved!) There were some who hated, and would not tell.

Poor Me! And, always, I fondly deemed, Spite of each frustrate deed, Just one, at the end, would show what I'd dreamed.

The Early Garden.

There is not a better way to begin to plan one's garden than to do it on paper. Make a scale drawing of your premises—that is, a diagram of the shape of the lot, letting each inch represent so many linear feet, in accordance with the actual dimensions of the plot.

STATESVILLE VISITOR

Mrs. C. V. Henkle, of Statesville, who is the guest of Mrs. William Nissen, of Winston, was graciously complimented by her hostess several days ago by a bridge given in her honor.

Mrs. C. V. Henkle, of Statesville, who is Mrs. William Nissen's charming visitor, was the guest of honor yesterday at a thoroughly enjoyable bridge party, given by her hostess, at her home on Cherry street.

Five tables were attractively arranged for bridge, the score cards bearing the fetching insignia of St. Patrick's Day.

After the games the hostess was assisted in serving the tempting salad course by Mrs. H. Montague and Miss Blanche Stafford.

A FORMER RESIDENT Mrs. A. L. Tessier, formerly of Charlotte, for some years of New York, arrived here this morning and is visiting at the home of Mrs. J. J. Ezzell.

Mrs. G. A. Bostian, of China Grove, who has been under treatment at the Charlotte Sanatorium was taken home this morning.

MRS. GIBBON FOR A WEEK Mrs. W. M. Kincaid goes to Mrs. R. L. Gibbon's today, and will be her guest for a week or so.

HOME AFTER TRIP Mr. E. D. Latta and daughter, Miss Acton, have returned from an extended trip. After several weeks in New York they went to Florida, where they have been for about three weeks.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY.

(Written by Miss Mary Palmer, librarian, for The News' Sunday Social Page.)

"The true University of these days is a collection of books."—Carlyle.

That the public library is a factor in civic development has been admitted wherever the library has been well supported, and has had an opportunity to set in motion certain movements.

This was clearly proved in the case of the Public Library of Grand Rapids, Mich. In March, 1905, the Public Library in its course of free lectures, brought Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, dean of the medical department of the University of Michigan, to the city to give a lecture on tuberculosis.

As part of the advertising of its lectures, the library always pushes its books on the subject of the lecture, and for information on the latest books they wrote to Dr. Livingston Farrand, then secretary of the National Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Dr. Farrand urged that the occasion should be used for the formation of a local society. The library did not feel that it was its function to organize a society in this way, but turned the suggestion over to persons who were interested and who used the lecture at the library as a means for working up interest in the formation of an organization.

A society was formed, and a few months later the society in cooperation with the library brought to the city a large tuberculosis exhibit with lectures during the day and evening. Some twelve or fifteen thousand persons were brought to the exhibit in the library building.

nearly one hundred thousand pieces of printed matter was distributed, and the people were thoroughly informed on the whole subject of tuberculosis in a way that they had never been before.

After these ideas had been so widely disseminated in the community there was little difficulty in getting from the city council money for pushing municipal work to care for and to eliminate this disease.

The Charlotte Carnegie Library might do such work as this if the city would be more generous in its policy toward this institution. But no tree can bear fruit until it has the necessary water and sunshine, and until the people of Charlotte supply an adequate amount of water and sunshine in the form of an increased appropriation, this library can never do the work it was intended to do.

On June 5th the library will ask the people to give the proceeds of a special tax of two cents on the one hundred dollars of taxable property. This election will either open to the library an opportunity for greatly increased service or it will condemn it to future stagnation.

The most popular book in the library during the past year has been the Rosary, and its popularity shows no sign of abatement, while the Mistress of Shenstone which is in a sense its sequel, seems to have an equal share of attention. The Broad Highway and Eve's Second Husband, both very new are gaining in popularity steadily.

What Diantha Did is the title of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman's last book. This is the first novel from the author that well-known Women and Economists, which created much discussion when it first came out and is still widely talked of.

Last week the Library received a shipment of juvenile books in Chivers' reinforced binding. They include many of the most popular boy's books of adventure with several of Mr. Seton's animal stories. There are 21 in all, but if the demand were supplied there would have been many times 21 purchased. It is hoped that this department will receive more attention as soon as the library is in a position to give it.

It is stated that Mr. Carnegie has agreed to give $210,000 to Los Angeles, Cal., for the erection of six new branch library buildings to cost $35,000 each.

A new book that will be very interesting to teachers and those concerned with social reform is Open Air Crusaders, a report of the Elizabeth McCormick Open Air School, together with a general account of open air school work in Chicago, and a chapter on school ventilation. It is well worth reading.

LEFT LAST NIGHT. Mr. Girard Wittson, the younger of Mrs. S. Wittkowsky's two sons, left last night on his return to New York. Mr. Wittson was called here by the death of his father. He will hereafter divide time between Charlotte and New York.

ACCIDENT TO MRS. SHEPPARD. The many friends of Mrs. J. W. Sheppard will regret to hear that her visit to her old home in New Jersey has been marred by an accident which befell her last week. She had a fall which dislocated her knee cap. Mrs. Sheppard will return as soon as she is able to walk.

TO VISIT HIS FATHER. Dr. E. C. Laird, who makes his home at the Central hotel, was joined yesterday by his oldest son, Mr. Chas. Laird, who came in from the South. Mr. Laird is a splendid type of fine Southern manhood. He will be with his father for a day or so.

HISTORICAL

[Contributed to the Sunday Social Page by a man of '76.]

"Seeing in a recent edition of The News, in connection with the sale of the Crowley home on Mint street, a history of the property and reference to the meeting there between Vance and Settle, I sent the following from Tom Dixon's 'Leopard Spots' which has the same historic interest.

Vance and Settle went from Charlotte, ('Independence' in the Leopard Spots) to 'Hambright' (Shelby). The scene of the following is in Shelby."

Chapter VIII—Book Two.

"Gaston found the preacher quietly smoking, seated on the rustic under a giant oak that stood in the corner of the square.

"Under this tree the speaker's stand had always been built for joint debates in political campaigns.

"Here, when a boy, he heard the great debate between Zebulon B. Vance and Judge Thomas Settle in a fierce campaign which followed the overthrow of Legree when the Republican party, under the leadership of Judge Settle made its desperate effort for life.

Settle, who was a man of masterful personality, eloquent, and dead earnest in his appeal for a new South, had made a speech of great power to a crowd that were hostile to every idea for which he stood; and yet he dazzled or stunned them into sullen silence.

And then he recalled with flashes of memory vivid as lightning, the miracle that had followed. He could see Vance now as he slowly lifted his big lion-like head, and faintly looked over the sea of faces with eagle eyes that could flash with resistless humor or blaze with the fury of elemental passion.

He reviewed the terrible past in which he had played the tragic role of their war governor, and tore into tatters both the facts of history and the logic of his opponent. And then he opened his batteries of wit and ridicule—wit that cut to the heart's red blood, and yet convulsed the hearer with its unexpected turn! Ridicule that withered and scorched what it touched into ashes! Five thousand as he swung them into heaven on the wings of deathless words, now screaming with laughter, and now hushed with tears!

"The scene that followed this triumph! Two stalwart mountain men snatched him from the rostrum and bore him on their shoulders through the shouting, weeping crowd! Women pressed close and kissed his hands, and the old men reached forward their hands to touch his garments! As if he could inherit the power of this king among men! Tonight as Gaston walked under that tree with his heart beating with the ecstasy of a new-found source of life, he felt that he could do, and that he would do, what the master had done before him!"
