The price was viewing his record and denying accusations made against him.

One particular feature stood out prominently at the rally. Not a word derogatory to Dr. Bland, candidate against Mayor Hawkins for the highest office within the gift of the city, was spoken; to the contrary words of praise were said for him. But for those who conducted his campaign, his "management," as it was termed, bitter denunciation, sarcastic refer ences, pungent, witty expressions were numerous. Speakers were personal in their references, each one of those closely affiliated with Dr. Bland being called by name.

In the beginning Mr. Hawkins cited the financial figures of the city and ndebtedness. "And if you return me to office again I promise you that when my second term has been completed the city will still be free from such indebtedness," he declared.

Touching upon the proposed issuince of bonds the speaker said that insofar as a water supply was concerned the issue was imperative. But it is left with the people to say whether these are issued or not," he remarked. With the permission of the people the city might create a debt, stated the speaker, but without porary insanity, the so-called brain their permission he would run it storms and other violent departures upon its income.
