The Girl Who Dared Makes Good Twice

Miss Bessie Burkheimer's Play, Presented Before Charlotte Audience For the Second Time, Draws a Large House And is Thoroughly Enjoyed.

For the second time since it was first announced a large crowd of Charlotte people witnessed last night at the Academy of Music a rendition of "The Girl Who Dared", Miss Bessie Burkheimer's attractive play. The audience was even larger last night than at its first presentation several months ago and attested its appreciation by generous applause, almost every song number being encored.

The production was replete with new and catchy songs, bright lines and clever dances. Several new characters were seen in the cast, which was an excellent one throughout. Miss Bessie Burkheimer, the authoress, again took the part of Virginia Neville, "The Girl", and was fully up to the standard set by herself at the previous presentation. Her first appearance on the stage was the signal for warm applause. Mr. Cyril Baxtresser, as Dick Brown of the New York Herland, made a distinct and instantaneous hit with the audience both in the lines assigned to him and the songs he sang. One of his best songs was "Day Dreams Brings Visions of Bliss," which gave opportunity for showing the real excellence of his voice. Another excellent number was "Let's Make Love Among the Roses," sung by Mr. Baxtresser and Miss Bessie Burkheimer, their voices blending in most agreeable manner and their interpretation of the song calling forth applause.

Mr. Bruce Nabers, as Jack Guion, a young American of impetuous and ardent temperament, provoked appreciative applause and proved himself one of the stars of the present cast as he was of the first presentation. Miss Helen Colt, as Miss Dorothy Rothfield, an American heiress, came in for generous applause and was one of the most polite and winning of the principal characters.

Other parts most capably taken were that of Lord John Buckingham, an English Duke seeking a fortune, by Mr. Henry Benoit, who besides measuring up to the part, has an excellent voice which was heard to best advantage in "If This Rose Told You All It Knows"; Marie Dupont, a maid to Virginia, by Miss Florence Burkheimer, who also led in several of the choruses with good effect; Lady Laura Wellington, aunt and guardian to Virginia, Miss Annie Summerrow; Nell, a street singer, little Miss Emma Jean Wynne, who was called back several times to repeat "I Want Some one to Flirt With Me"; and Mademoiselle De Pompedour, a prima donna, Miss Annie McKone, who showed her voice to be one of prima donna proportions in "The Glow Worm."

Among the most striking of the choruses were, The Flying Machine Girls, The Hobbie Skirt Girls, The Yachting Chorus and The Evening Gown chorus. One of the most enjoyable of these was the Flying Machine Girls, which with Miss Bessie Burkheimer, rendered in fine style "Come, Josephine, in My Flying Machine."

"The Girl Who Dared," has proved itself a production of real worth and the young authoress is to be congratulated on its second successful appeal to a Charlotte audience, which showed by its behavior, both on first and second presentation that it was getting its money's worth. The cast is excellent and the songs the very latest hits. It is bound to draw a good audience wherever it is presented.

There is a probability that it will be produced at Shelby at an early date, several requests having been made to Miss Burkheimer to present it there as well as at other places.

—Mr. Dan Bradley, who was burned out of house and home on East Fifth street, March 5th, has rebuilt and is ready, he and his family, to move in.

—Work is being carried to rapid completion on the improvements in the clerk of the court's office at the court house. The workmen are doing a good job of it and the convenience will be very great, when completed, to the public as well as to the officials.

The Home of the Orphan

That was an interesting, a helpful talk of Rev. Mr. Walker last evening; and then the music, how beautiful! how inspiring! The Prof., the soloists, the trio, the chorus, all seemed attuned in noble, righteous effort. "More love, O Christ, to Thee, More love to Thee."

AS I LOOKED AND LISTENED

It struck me as strange that more people do not use the Building & Loan plan for charity, for church extension, and especially in the line of creating a sinking fund for the discharge of debt, which most religious organizations have to carry. It's true much of it is being done, but it is well adapted to the work, and should be more generally employed.
