EASTER PICTURES.

The Child.

As bright as a fairy
So dimpled and airy
She stood in the church like a blossom of dawn
With lilies and daisies,
To list to his praises,
Who vanquished the grave on a far
Easter morn.

A blue wave had lent her,
A red rose had sent her
The hue in her eye, and the blush on her face
No wave from the river,
No red rose could give her,
The charm of her dainty and innocent
grace.

The Debutante.

The child has wandered from those
Easter ways
O'er thornless blossoms of sweet yesterday
But robber Time has not bereft her face
Or girlish form of any olden grace.

With eyes of river blue, and cheeks of rose,
She stands where fragrant buds of life
unclasp,
And clasping, Hope's bright rosary she waits
For Time to lead her through Youth's golden gates.

The dove with white wings spread to greet the dawn
Is not pure, nor any rose of morn
More sweet, than the fair girl this
Easter day
Who kneels again where chancelled lilies sway. M. H. F.

HINTS TO THE HOSTESS.

A newly made matron sometimes is a bit puzzled as to the requirements of her recently attained position. If she'll learn what not to do, the rest will follow carefully and easily. Presumably she'll soon wish to entertain at dinner. A well appointed table offers a delightful avenue to social distinction—and properly cooked, well served dinners are remembered. A few "don'ts" carefully observed will assure success:

Don't put the two brightest people together.

Don't mix sets. Guests should have congenial interests.

Don't put a man next his wife, or on the same side of the table.

Don't have nervous maids.

Don't fall to be ready and in the drawing room five minutes before the dining hour.

Don't confide any of your nervous anticipations to your husband.

Don't fail to overlook the table in detail before the arrival of your guests, and above all

Don't allow conversation to be entirely between couples. Make it general.—Ledger-Dispatch.

More Weather "Reliability."

(From the New York World.)
The weather man gave fair warning of a bad day yesterday; he said it was to be an ideal Easter Day. Consequently, we had 57 varieties of snow and the windiest winds that ever distorted a woman's hat.

HOME AGAIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Bryan have returned from Winston-Salem, where they spent Easter.

LEFT LAST NIGHT.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Thompson and Dr. and Mrs. John H. Gibbon, of Philadelphia, returned home last evening, after being guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Gibbon for a few days.

MRS. CHAMBERS IN WASHINGTON.

Mrs. W. J. Chambers, who left several days ago to attend the Continental Congress D. A. R. in Washington, will go from there to Baltimore. She will be absent for a couple of weeks.

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER ON SHOW.

There was Edna Wallace Hopper in a purple gown that caused the avenue to pause more than any other gown seen on Fifth avenue yesterday. From the rows of buttons on the shoes, low shoes of purple at that, the skirt was slit upward for a stretch of at least seven inches. And the wind was blowing. Accompanying the outfit was a particularly tall young man who had grasped that we don't wear frock coats now. He wore a cutaway and tile and he was between 300 and 200 feet tall—comparing his height, that is, with Miss Hopper. Oh, well, if you want to argue, he was 6 feet 3, anyway.—N. Y. Sun.

Miss Mattie Hyndman went to Greensboro this morning to visit Miss Pearl Jones. She goes as a delegate from Tryon Street Methodist Philathea class to the Baraca-Philathea convention. Miss Hyndman goes a day sooner than the convention in order to be present at Miss Annie Jones' graduating recital which takes place tonight.

EASTER IN NEW YORK.

Miss Annie Wilson, who went north to join her sister, Miss Sarah White Wilson, in Washington and with her spend the Easter holidays in New York, will not be home possibly for a week or two. After returning to Washington with Miss Sarah, she will spend several days there.

GUEST OF MRS. DAVIS.

Mrs. M. C. Davis, has as her guest at her home on the Lawyer's road, her sister, Mrs. M. S. Ritchie, of Concord.

IN EASTERN PART OF STATE.

Mrs. C. H. C. Mills and pretty children, Katherine and Charles are visiting at Mrs. Mills' father's Col. Wilson Lamb, in Williamston, N. C. They will return early in May.

Mrs. G. M. Benison, of Chillocothe, O., is the guest of Mrs. H. C. Kendrick.

Mrs. F. M. Shannonhouse has as her guest, a former Charlotte woman—and a very popular one—Miss Sallie Summer. Miss Summer is a sister of Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant.

The many friends of Mrs. Vinton Liddell will regret to know that she is quite indisposed. She has been confined to the house for several days.

TO VISIT IN VIRGINIA.

"So Glad To Have Met You."

"Come and See Us Again."
