Loch Lyne.
The lilac lights are long
On faith Loch Lyne,
And sweet as is a song
The tide comes in.

I hear the curfews call
Afar and near;
Echo, antiphonal,
Makes answer clear.

Breakers begin to surge
O'er beach and bar,
Then on the twilight's verge
Trembles one star.

Soft dies the sound of song,
The tides are low,
And lilac lights are long
On fair Loch Lyne.
—Clinton Scollard.

Utility of Beauty.
Victor Hugo relates in a chapter of "Les Misérables" how the bishop taught in an answer made to his housekeeper the utility of beauty. She expostulated with his lordship for giving a full quarter of his garden to his flowers, saying that it would be better and wiser to grow lettuce there than bouquets. "Ah, Madame Magloire," replied the bishop, "the beautiful is as useful as it is beautiful."

RECITAL BY VIOLIN DEPARTMENT.

The recital given by the violin department of Elizabeth College Conservatory of Music was a great success and reflected great credit on Miss Von Gilluwe, the instructor, as well as the institution. The program was made up of violin solos and ensemble numbers, and two orchestra numbers. The orchestra consisting of fifteen pieces, rendered Gounod's "March Pontificale" and the overture to the "Cellophane" and from the way the numbers were rendered, it was evident that the members were thoroughly trained, for the playing was in many respects most perfect.

While all the students did remarkably well, in the solo, as well as the ensemble numbers, the individual number worthy of special mention is the a. and b. number (Andante and Perpetual motion) rendered by Miss Ethel Durham. Miss Durham has a good tone and a fine technique; she is a fine performer. Among the ensemble numbers, worthy of special mention are the "sextet" (allegro from 9th symphony, and song from "Oberon") and the "trio in G-major" by Soechting (for violin, cello and piano) this was undoubtedly the best ensemble number. All in all, the program was good and thoroughly enjoyable, as are all recitals at Elizabeth.

They are never too long to be tiresome.

MRS. WATT'S GUEST.

Mrs. D. H. Hardaway, of Columbus, Ga., arrived here yesterday afternoon and is a delightful guest at the home of Mrs. Walter W. Watt, of East Ninth street. Mrs. Hardaway is charter member of one of Georgia's largest D. A. R. chapters, and as a daughter, as well as a very charming woman, is welcome to this town, notably patriotic in sentiment. Mrs. Watt will entertain for Mrs. Hardaway Thursday afternoon at the Manufacturers' Club.

WILL VISIT MRS. YOUNG.

Miss Mary Anthony, art teacher at the Presbyterian College, will visit Mrs. A. M. Young after commencement. That Miss Anthony is not to return to Charlotte next season, is a matter of sincere regret.

MISS BURKHEIMER AND "THE GIRL WHO DARED."

Through invitation of the Granville Chapter U. D. C. of Oxford, Miss Besie Burkheimer leaves for Oxford on Thursday to present her musical creation "The Girl Who Dared" for the Granville Chapter, June 2nd and 3d. This is her first official engagement and the chapter extends to her the warmest welcome and support. Mrs. W. H. White, president of the Oxford Chapter, and who is the mother of Judge Crawford Biggs, will chairperson Miss Burkheimer while in that city. The first week in June is a gala week, being the closing exercises of the Horner Military College. Miss Burkheimer will attend the military dances and social functions. She will be absent from Charlotte a month or more.

MIMORA INN CROWDED.

Mrs. W. W. Graham and daughter, Miss Gest Graham, and son, Master W. W. Graham, Jr., have returned from Tryon, where they spent several weeks at the Mimora Inn. The inn has been crowded all winter with Southern and Northern tourists. It will not be open this summer.

MEETS WITH MISS JONES.

The Extension Chapter of the Young Woman's Christian Association will meet on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock with Miss Minta Jones.

BRILLIANT GREETING TO NATIONAL CLUB WOMEN.

Notably brilliant in personnel, beautiful in floral adornment, charming socially, and interesting to a degree was the reception tendered Mrs. Phillip N. Moore, president of the National Federation of Woman's Clubs, and Mrs. Alvin Davis, of Boston, director on the general federation board yesterday afternoon at the elegant home of Mrs. J. E. Reilly, yesterday's president of the North Carolina State Federation of Woman's Clubs, and yesterday director from North Carolina on the General Federation Board, by the Woman's Club of Charlotte.

The Reilly home, which by beauty of arrangement and elegance of apparel lends itself so charmingly to the pleasing art which makes the South distinctive from any other country in the world—hospitality—was radiant in its pink rose setting, yesterday. The Colonial hall dining room, and parlors gave greeting in fragrance and a roseate beauty to the distinguished guest from the Northland.

Mrs. C. C. Hook stood at the head of the receiving line. Next was Mrs. Moore in an exquisite lace gown with pearl trimmings, and wearing superb diamonds. Mrs. Reilly in amethyst chiffon and silk stood to Mrs. Moore's right and presented Mrs. Davis, who wore a Parisian gown of Princess lace, with garnitures of pearls, an exquisite diamond pin at her throat and a gold band set with diamonds across her hair. Others receiving were: Mesdames F. C. Abbott, H. A. Murrill, I. W. Faison, W. S. Liddell, W. C. Rogers, Frank Lethro, Gordon Finger, W. L. Nicholson, C. B. Bryant, Ruth Wray, Frank McNinch, A. S. Reid, John Purser, J. B. Spence, Miss Josephine Dillehay, and Mrs. George Patterson, of Concord.

At the punch bowl was Mrs. A. D. Glascock, in white lace over pink, assisted by Mrs. Laban McDowell, and Misses Ruth and Laura Reilly, Ethel Durham, Minta Jones, Helen and Anna Forbes Liddell, Margaret Abbott, Mary Brockenbrough, Laurie Spong, Miriam Long and Corrie Fore.

Mrs. E. P. Tingley in amethyst mesaline and pearls, presided at the beautifully appointed table, the central adornment of which was a mass of pink roses, in the dining room. After the calling through had passed down the line and every one had the pleasure of greeting the distinguished club women of national fame personally, the privilege of hearing them talk, not as gracious charming society women, but as able learned representative club women was given.

Mrs. Hook, with grace of word and manner, made the introductions, which officially made the president and director of the General Federation known to the Charlotte club. She quoted one of the state's most brilliant women, Mrs. Zebulon Vance, of Asheville, who introduced Mrs. Bailey at the Federation meeting at Asheville as "one of those foreigners from Massachusetts, whom we are glad to know." "I present to you," said Mrs. Hook, "that foreigner whom we are glad to know—Mrs. Alvin Bailey, of Boston." With charming grace Mrs. Bailey responded. She expressed her pleasure at being in North Carolina and having opportunity of meeting the Woman's Club women. "I find the spirit of good comradeship amongst club women where ever I go. They are the same in the world over. It was an extremely pleasant and great privilege to have been in Asheville and hear the splendid report of the North Carolina Federation."

"I will take back East with me the pleasanter memories of your state, of you each as individual club women."

Mrs. Moore, president of the National Federation, was then presented by Mrs. Hook, the latter laying high tribute to the National president, a woman of brain and heart.

Looking over the brilliant scene Mrs. Moore said: "This seems like an aftermath of Asheville. I like to see the North Carolina Federation in all phases of its work, and it is a peculiar privilege to be in the home of Mrs. Reilly, who, as director on the General Board from your state, did so much for the state. I heard a gentleman say, yesterday, that Mrs. Reilly was the best business woman he ever met. She came from St. Louis, so we claim her and her splendid ability."

Mrs. Moore then launched out to the main message she had for the Charlotte club. She spoke of the endowment fund that the General Federation is to have; of the co-operation necessary; of the work the Federation is doing along the Child Welfare line. "The government," said Mrs. Moore, "has a bureau of commerce, a bureau of fish, why not a child bureau—why leave out the best asset of the country—the child?"

With rare ability and interest that compelled every eye and ear, Mrs. Moore told of the Woman's Club work in Panama, in the difficulty the government had in keeping men on the isthmus suggested to President Taft to have the women of the Isthmus organized into a Woman's Club. He sent an organizer there, and the result of which was the organization of "The Canal Zone Federation of Women's Clubs." "No more trouble was had," said Mrs. Moore, "in regard to the men leaving the work, so you see the women, as well as the men, have helped to build the Panama canal."

An interesting account of the life of the canal followed, all of which tended to emphasize the use and benefit of women's clubs and federation work. Mrs. Moore has exquisite poise. She is strikingly handsome and about her is that atmosphere of refinement and culture that marks the gentle woman of the North and the gentleman of the South, alike. She talked her way into the brains and hearts of Charlotte's club women.
