Social and Personal

(By ADDIE WILLIAMS CALDWELL)

Take off your anger and take off your bile. Take off your bitter and put on a smile; In the summer time heat doesn't count. No matter how lofty the records may mount. Take off your selfishness, meanness and vice, And all the sweet land will cool off as if ice. Were forming to help you keep cool and keep fine. With your heart all aglow and your spirit ashine.

On with the next — this day is done; Some goals are lost; some goals are won; No matter how the shadows cast Or sunshine glow; these are the past. On to the next; each day brings back A reborn glory to the track. The marching world takes in its course Toward the peaks and power of force. Good-bye, the past! Look straight ahead! The rose of yesterday is read! —Benttown Bard.

THE AIGRETTE. All of us have seen aigrettes in women's hats. Their grace and beauty, their delicate, diaphanous qualities, never have failed to impress us.

When we study an aigrette on the head of a woman, the combination seems entirely appropriate, and the objectionable features of it do not occur to us until we learn something of the aigrette's history.

Professor T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, is quoted by the New York Herald as saying:

"The pure white aigrette, which brings the high price, must come from a bird freshly killed and it must come from a bird freshly killed and it must come from a bird in breeding time, because this beautiful curved feather does not grow at any other time in the life of the bird.

McAlister-Carson Weddings Celebrated

Golden Wedding of Col. and Mrs. A. C. McAlister, of Asheboro, and Silver Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Carson, of Charlotte.

Last week, in the pretty little city of Asheboro, there was celebrated two events—the most memorable, socially speaking, ever known in that section of the state—the golden wedding of Colonel and Mrs. Alexander C. McAlister, of Asheboro, and the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Carson, of Charlotte.

Golden and silver memories of the 50 years, and of the 25 years commemorated, made an atmosphere fragrant with sweet thoughts precious to each and all there present with suggestiveness of the happiness of this ideal family and ideal home.

The McAlister family and the Carson family in the perfect union of a half a century ago so beautifully commemorated last week were but one of the most prominent, most potential, most dominant influences in the social and religious life of this state.

Of traditions, than which there are no loftier, no purer, no more beautiful, the McAlister and the Carson families represent the highest religious and social life of this state.

The joint celebration therefore of the golden wedding—50 years of as perfect a union as earthly love can know, of Col. and Mrs. McAlister, and the silver wedding of their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Carson, was an event of statewide importance.

The McAlister home, famed for its culture, its refinement, its intellectuality of its people, its hospitality, its mindfulness of the stranger that is within the gates—and its earnest piety, witnessed the gathering within its spacious halls and rooms last week of the family connection of the McAlisters, the Carsons, and a few most intimate friends.

Dr. Stokes, of Salisbury, a friend of the McAlister and Carson families, lines of affection drew them to this lovely home, and happy he or she who formed part of either the golden or silver circle.

Next season's debutante. Miss Mary Neal Mellon has returned from Washington, where she spent the winter at Gunston. Miss Mellon will be one of next season's debutantes and a very handsome one.

TO STORM CHAPEL HILL. An irresistibly fascinating bunch of Charlotte girls leave Monday for Chapel Hill to attend commencement.

The wedding dinner. Three long tables extended the length of the Colonial dining-room. One of the tables was the gold table, one was the silver table and the other was the grand children's table.

The silver table was as beautiful in its silver effect as was the gold in its golden beauty. White roses were used in silver baskets; silver candlesticks, white tapers and silver shades and cakes were in white and silver forms of the decorative features.

At each place was a wedding souvenir booklet arranged by Mrs. Mathews. On the outside a gold and silver wedding bell were united with a bow of gold and silver ribbons. To the right of the bells were the names: Alexander Cary McAlister, Adelaide Cornelius Worth. 1861-1911. James Edward Carson Sarah Thames McAlister 1886-1911 Asheboro, North Carolina May 22, 1911.

On the second page were these quotations: "Children's children are the glory of old men;" "And the glory of children are their fathers." Proverbs 17-6.

"The house of the righteous shall stand." —Proverbs 12-7. On the next page was the following: Invocation The Reverend William B. McIlwaine, Jr.

Toastmaster Mr. Hal M. Worth. "The Father and Mother" Mr. Alexander W. McAlister. "The Girl of '61" Col. James T. Morehead.

"The Groom and Guests in 1886" Mr. Harvey Howell Orr. "The Peerless Bride, Wife, Mother and Friend" Mrs. Maud Craig Mathews.

"The Children's Children" Miss May Bell McAlister. Roll Call of "The Children's Children" McAlister Carson, Frank Little McAlister, Mary Williams Carson, John McAlister, Maud Craig Carson, Lacy Little McAlister, Jean McAlister, John Worth Carson, Alexander McAlister, Flex Reid McAlister, Sara Carson, James McAlister, Jr. Adelaide Cornelius Worth, Edna Carson, John Worth McAlister.

Col. Morehead was to have been one of Col. McAlister's groomsmen, but the "call to arms" prevented. Dr. Stokes, of Salisbury, a friend of the McAlister and Carson families, toasted Col. and Mrs. McAlister as host and hostess.

A quotation from Wordsworth was used by Mrs. Mathews in her tribute to Mrs. Carson: "By vain affections unenthralled Through absolute when duty calls To meet the world's broad eye. Pure as the holiest cloistered nun That ever feared the tempting sun."

Mr. Orr's tribute to the groom of '86 was a gem. The bride of '61 wore a handsome dress of black crepe de chine over silk with a shot of Duchess lace. She wore a full set of hair jewelry, so popular when she was a bride.

The bride of '86 wore a beautiful gown of white Liberty silk trimmed in dull silver passemerie and embroidered with silver threads. It was one of Miss Gouger's most exquisite creations.

Another notable costume was that of Miss Edna Carson, the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carson. She wore a dress her father—for whom she is named—wore 46 years ago.

The morning after the wedding supper the immediate McAlister and Carson families sat down to a wedding breakfast served in the old English breakfast room. The bride of the golden wedding found at her plate 50 gold coins. The bride of the silver wedding found at her plate 25 silver coins from the four sons of Col. and Mrs. McAlister: Messrs. A. W., James, Calvin and Gilmer McAlister.

Asheville, N. C.—Commercial Asheville was given a genuine shock when it became known that, effective June 15, the Asheville cotton mills would close down indefinitely. The reason assigned for the closing down of the mills was that the plant had not made any money for the past two years.

The Asheville Cotton Mills was one of the largest industrial plants in the city and its closing down will mean a distinct loss to the town. It was largely owned and controlled by the Cones, the well-known cotton mill men of North Carolina. The mills have been in operation for the past ten or fifteen years.

Do Your Cooking in the Cool

A hot kitchen is little better than a prison in summer. But the range is there, so all the cooking and the washing must be done there, too.

What a relief it would be to move the range where you pleased. You can do this with a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove—cook your dinner out on the porch, if you like. It is the only range that is really portable—that works equally well in any place.

The long, enameled chimneys carry the heat directly up to saucapans, oven or boiler; you get full value from your fuel, without waste.
