A scheme of compulsory physical training for the municipal officials of Schoenberg has just been introduced by Herr Dominicus, the newly appointed Lord Mayor, of the beautiful western suburb of Berlin, in order to counteract the evil effects of their long hours of desk work. All the rounger officials are granted an hour's leave on one day every week during which they are put through a course of athletic exercises in the playground of one of the city's schools under the direction of the school's gymnastic instructor. Every official is expected to participate in the training if the medical officer reports him physically fit to undergo the exertion, and regular attendance is compulsory.

Herr Dominicus, who was formerly in charge of the evening continuation school in Strassburg, effected by a similar scheme a vast amount of improvement in the health of the scholars. He first started gymnastic classes for the tailors' apprentices, who, he considered, by reason of the close confinement of their occupation, stood most in need of physical training, with such excellent results that the master shoemakers came and request ed him to do the same for their Rev. The efforts of the government have been partly countteracted by Polish activity in buying land. There are special Polish banks for assisting Poles in acquiring parcels of land, and their work has been so effective that for some years most of the land bought by the Prussian settlement commission for dividing up among German peasants has been acquired from Germans themselves. In order to enable the commission to carry forward its settlement plans in a sys tematic way and extend the borders of German settlements already estab ished, the diet, or Prussian legisla ture, passed in 1908 a law permitting the commission to dispossess Polish landholders, within certain limits, under the law of eminent domain. This law, however, has never been enforced. The continued acquisition of German lands by Poles has called forth a strong demand that it be put into operation at once.
