AVIATION.

The Washington Herald is grieved when it reflects over the decadence of aviation enthusiasm in this country.

While the sport gains new converts in other countries daily.

"It is a remarkable fact that although an American was the first to design and operate an aeroplane successfully this nation has been sadly deficient in the development and use of the air-conquering machines."

It has been only a couple of years since the Wright brothers started the world with their achievements at Fort Myer, and when the journey was made through the air from Washington to Alexandria and return, the machine carrying two passengers, the conquest of the air was a glory all our own.

"Since then, however, aviation has been almost at a standstill in this country. In Europe, the flight from Paris to Madrid, over the Pyrenees, has been successfully accomplished, and now the trip from Paris to Rome, several hundred miles is another tribute to the skill and daring of the aviators. In this country, some time ago, Curtiss flew from Albany to New York and later Hamilton essayed the trip from New York to Philadelphia and return, landing finally in a marsh. Since then no few flights have been attempted. A long exhibition in the air for the purpose of attracting crowds to county fairs has been the extent of aviation feats."

"In France, men fly a hundred miles every day, and the trip is so commonplace that the newspapers do not chronicle the event. Even a journey from Paris to London hardly excites attention. It is strange that the aviators in this country are so indifferent to the possibilities of their art. They seem to have resigned entirely in favor of their brothers across the seas."

The fight against the festive housefly is becoming universal in its scope. The editors have all taken up their editorial cudgels against this germ-disseminating malefactor. Editor Weathers, of the Cleveland Star, is one of the latest recruits.

"Flies have perhaps never been so numerous as they are this season. Because of these germ-carrying pests, there is more sickness right at this season than there has been in some time. 'Swat the fly' is a good slogan. Yes, kill them all and have less sickness and fewer deaths."

It will be recalled that just when the sport was in full flower, when a number of notable distance and altitude exhibitions were being heralded in various parts of this country, the stark monster entered the scene and claimed the majority of the best known aviators. Almost every big effort cost one or two lives, and it is just possible, that since aviators are simple human beings, the idea gained converts that the best way to live to a ripe old age was to stay on the ground.

"We have no earthly use for the calamity bowler. The Shelby Aurora makes the following prediction of continued drought:

"The weather man is waiting for the Charlotte baseball team to win a game—then it will rain."

Mr. Bryan is said to have experienced that old time and comfortable feeling on logging in his recent fight.

We believe that all readers will agree in the opinion that the "Phantom of the Opera" was a splendid story. The next to be presented will be "The Professor's Mystery," and more will be said regarding this story later.

"Shelby's going to pull off a celebration that will overshadow Charlotte's Twentieth of May," says the Cleveland Star. Which will be going it strong.

Raleigh is a slogan-hunting, and we trust the matter will not end there.

Virginia is also contending with a quadruple senatorial conundrum.

Will that opinion have the effect of stirring up Duke's mixture?

Underwood pulled the wool over Bryan's eyes.

Woodrow Wilson is the man of the hour.

BLIND PEOPLE GIVE CONCERT IN HIGH POINT

Special to The News.

High Point, June 3.—The grand concert given by the members of the Blind Association last night was of a very high class order. The numbers were difficult and were faultlessly rendered. The following is the program:

Kentucky Babe (Giebel)—Chorus Class.

Novellett, Piano Solo (Shuman)—Miss Susie Sauls, Goldsboro, N. C.

Invincible Eagle March (Souza)—Band.

Many of the numbers were encored and the additional numbers were of the same high order—exhibiting the same rare talent.

The address by Mr. John Roy, superintendent of the State Institute for the Blind, at Raleigh, was enjoyable and instructive.

The business portion of the convention opened yesterday morning with Mr. Morrow Fisher of Raleigh, the president, presiding. Mayor Tate gave the address of welcome and Mr. Costner of Raleigh, responded.

Judge Eure, of Greensboro, delivered an entertaining one and closed by reviewing the advanced lines upon which they were moving with their educational and industrial work.

A committee was appointed to raise funds to provide a home for blind women.

A resolution was presented asking the legislature to require all pianoters to pass an examination and have license.

At the election of officers, Mr. Henry Easley, of High Point, was elected president and Mrs. W. T. Reaves, of Raleigh, vice-president.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Tyree and Mrs. Tyree will arrive tonight and be at home at the Elwood. Dr. Tyree has recently accepted a call as pastor of High Point's First Baptist church.

June 24th Miss Lucy Eshelman, secretary board of civil service examiners, will hold examination for clerks and carriers at the post office.

Mr. Chaney, father of Mr. E. F. Chaney, one of the town's well-known insurance agents, died suddenly last night at the home of his son, on Ray street. Mr. Chaney seemed in his usual health and had been on the street in the afternoon, but soon after returning home was seized with a pain in his chest and died almost immediately. The deceased was 66 years old. The burial will take place at Thomasville.

Mr. D. W. Wyatt, superintendent of the new post office building, while assisting in the removal of a derrick had the misfortune to get a rib broken and one of his hips badly bruised. While not dangerously hurt he has suffered intensely and receives the sympathy of the friends he has made during his temporary sojourn in High Point.

Women Barred From Vets Parades

By Associated Press. Nashville, Tenn., June 3.—As the result of several girls appearing in the recent Confederate veteran parade at the Little Rock re-union, Frank Cheatham Bivouac of Confederate veterans last night adopted the following:

"Resolved, That no woman shall appear in the parades of the camps, the state divisions or the general association astraddle, or should any so appear the officers in charge of said parade shall politely request that they retire."

The same resolution requested generals not to appoint young women as staff officers.

After the Loan Sharks. The business men who are taking steps to abate the loan shark infamy in Houston are engaged in a work that is not only praiseworthy from a philanthropic point of view, but they are conserving their own material interests as well. Few cities in the south have been more outrageously cursed with this sinister evil than Houston. One of the leaders in the movement asserts he discovered that not less than $1,000 a day goes to the account of extortionate interests and that large sums taken from the earnings of the working men of this city means untold misery to hundreds of families.

The practical way to fight the loan sharks is to put cheap money within the reach of needy laboring men at reasonable rates of interest to be paid in small installments. And that is the sensible method which the business men who have the matter under consideration are going to adopt. For the benefit of the gentlemen engaged in this praiseworthy undertaking, we will say that Norfolk, which with Portsmouth, is about as large a city as Houston, has solved the problem through the establishment of a loan bank, incorporated under the laws of Virginia. The institution has been in operation long enough to demonstrate its complete success, both as a destroyer of the loan shark and as a business institution.

We noticed sometime ago an address by one of its officers who declared the bank had earned a fine dividend on the capital and that not one loan had been lost. By adopting the system of reasonable interest and small installments for the repayment of loans the laboring men had been emancipated from the tyranny of the former oppressors and that even in the absence of security the loans were promptly paid.

If we are not mistaken, this bank has broadened its scope so as to include savings accounts, thus relieving labor's necessities with labor's money and paying to the depositor 4 per cent interest per annum upon his deposits. Not long ago, business men of Atlanta inaugurated a loan bank with $50,000 capital and it will soon be in operation. It is organized, or will be, upon the Norfolk plan.

It will mean much to the laboring men of Houston to be able to obtain money at 10 per cent per annum instead of from 10 to 25 per cent per month. It will mean greater independence and greater purchasing power for them, more comfort, more self-respect and better citizenship. It will mean much for the business men in the way of more trade and fewer bad bills, and for the city at large it will mean greater thrift and productive capacity.

There are many ways in which $50,000 might be used for the benefit of Houston, but invested in a loan bank that will put the loan sharks out of business it will accomplish more good than in any other possible way. Not only that, properly organized and conducted it will earn 10 per cent upon the capital invested, and certainly no stockholder could complain of that.—Houston Post.
