It is not known what form these inquiries took, or what reply to them was made by Secretary of State Knox. At present it is pointed out that the investigation that has been, or is about to be, inaugurated by the government -for no one is supposed to know whether the government is investigating the coffee trust or not, and inquiries at the department of justice elicit no definite reply, has not produced re-sults sufficiently definite to make clear what action will be necessary. Consequently, if reported information is correct, the Brazilian government is no wiser today concerning the steps that the United States is taking to break up the pool of coffee capitalists than it was when inquiries were recently .970 made at the state department.

However. Brazil is not resting on her oars. That government is sitting up and taking a whole lot of notice of what is going on. One story has it that there are a number of Brazilian secret service agents in this country watching the moves that are made by the government investigators. If this be true, it is safe to say that Brazil is as fully advised of what this government is doing in respect to the coffee trust as the department of justice officials and the president. The coffee exchange people in New York are also on the lookout and are displaying much activity. The trust is highly unpopular with the coffee brokers and merchants, as well as with the wholesalers, retailers and consumers. The brokers and jobbers complain that the Henry Weyman, the youthful Ameritrust keeps such a tight hand on the market that there is no speculative possibility. Its domination of supplies s such that any body attempting an independent movement can instantly be swamped by the overpowering might of the trust, either by withholding supplies, or dumping them on the
