IVEY'S

Social and Personal

(By ADDIE WILLIAMS CALDWELL)

WHEN LIFE AND LONGING.

When life and longing loose their hold,
And death's long night's is nigh,
When hearts are dumb, and lips are cold,
Lord, teach me how to die.

Teach me, when earthly visions fade
And human helpers fail,
To boldly enter, undismayed,
The trackless shadow-vaile.

Teach me, in simple, childlike way
My ready trust to give;
But oh, against that solemn day,
Lord, teach me first to live.

Did you ever notice how in everything that promises best and sweetest, the thing toward which you look with the keenest and most satisfying anticipation, there is always some hateful, venomous little sting that manages to get in and mar the charm of it for you? Well, it is just that way; that which we love best, and hope the most from, is quite sure to fall of its full measure of relaxation.

There were two men-friends once, who had cared a great deal for each other, and one of them was about to realize something for which he had toiled a good deal, and from which he had hoped for great results.

That he had sacrificed his friend somewhat was true, and that he added a sting of insult to the wrong was bitter, no less than true. The friend resented it keenly, and one day another friend said to him:

"Why don't you punish him for that? He is clearly in the wrong, from a legal, no less than an honorable, standpoint."

"No," replied the party aggrieved, "I shall not do that, although at first I was fully determined to do so; not so much because of the matter itself, as because of the insult following it. But because of the insult following it, I have had a hard struggle myself, and always I have noticed that when I looked forward with peculiar interest to any certain thing, that someone always managed to spoil it with a sting. I know just what this matter means to that man, and after a long fight with myself, I determined not to be the sting to his anticipation. That's why."

Policemen Shot And Negro Killed

Excursion of Charlotte Negroes to Columbia Marked by a Pistol Duel in Which a Negro is Killed and Two Charlotte Policemen Injured.

The negro excursion, which was run from Charlotte to Columbia yesterday, ended tragically last night when a pistol duel between John Reeves, a Rock Hill negro, and two Charlotte policemen resulted in the death of the negro and the serious wounding of Policeman J. R. Eskridge and the slight wounding of Policeman J. T. Wilson.

Policemen Wilson and Eskridge accompanied the excursionists to Columbia yesterday to preserve order on the train and the trip was made back almost to Rock Hill without incident. Between Fort Mill and Rock Hill, a negro from Rock Hill, who was in the smoking compartment of a car, fired a pistol out of the window. Policeman J. T. Wilson went into the car at once and told the negro to hand over his pistol.

"I won't hand over nothing. I'll shoot you 'd—m you," said the negro and rose up from his seat to execute the threat. The policeman struck the negro with his fist and grabbed his wrist. While they were scuffling between the seats the negro fired twice; one of the shots struck Mr. Wilson in the hip and at the same time Officer Eskridge exclaimed, "My Gog, John, I am dead."

Mr. Wilson says he looked up then and saw Eskridge fall and drew his own pistol and fired one time, killing the negro instantly. The negro was left lying in the seat where he was and the train crew carried Mr. Eskridge into the baggage car. There they found that he had been shot in the side. Mr. Wilson said he had not noticed the other officer's presence in the car until he heard his exclamation that he was shot.

The negro's body was put off at Fort Mill and an inquest will be held over it tomorrow. None of the other excursionists joined in the disturbance and caused no trouble of any kind.

The news of the shooting was sent at once to the police department here and Chief Christenburk, with another officer or two, met the train at the Southern station. Mr. Eskridge was taken from the baggage car, placed on a stretcher and taken to the Presbyterian hospital. Although he was weak from the loss of blood, he did not seem to be in a dangerous condition, and was sleeping well in a short time.

This morning, however, he was not doing so well. He is shot through his right lung. Dr. C. M. Strong is attending him. He is being kept very quiet and it will take time to see what the result will be. His condition is considered serious and no effort has yet been made to probe for the wound, owing to his weakened condition.

Policeman J. T. Wilson has been on duty only a short time as a regular policeman, though he has been serving as policeman in North Charlotte for quite a while and has proved himself a cool and courageous officer on more than one occasion. Mr. Eskridge also is a suburban policeman, serving in Belmont. Both policemen were to receive $5 for their services in going on the excursion to preserve order.

Each of the policemen claim that they fired the shot that killed the negro and Mr. Eskridge says that he fired three shots after he was wounded.

—Mr. Jim Walker, who was unable to go to Rochester with the Shriners and drum corps on account of illness of his mother, is receiving full assurance that the boys are thinking of him. Every mail brings him a bunch of post cards and souvenirs.
