(By ADDIE WILLIAMS CALDWELL)

FOR HOT WEATHER.

O what a joy it is to glide Across the ice-bound lake; Athwart the mere to slip and slide As on some frosted cake! What bliss to dabble in the snow, As did the glacial man— Jerusha, will you kindly go And start that 'lectric fan?

Ah, how I love to lie beneath These blankets soft and warm, That hold me in their genial shawl Safe from the nipping storm! What do I care for wintry blast! That roll the frozen sea? Gee! How this beastly hot spell lasts! Old Merck's at ninety-three!

How sweet the sound of Christmas chimes Upon the crisp night air, That tell of sweet and happy times For mortals everywhere! I love to hear their music good That tells of widespread joys— O, if the cursed locusts would Stop their infernal noise!

Who hates the crisp of winter days With all their icy wealth That crown us with the welcome bays Of an enduring health, Would quarrel with the summer sun, Or the soft August night— And after all is said and done The cuss would be quite right!

—A. Sufferan Man.
