How Fast Can a Child Run Over a Sorel Horse Trot?
Recorder D. B. Smith, Col. T. L. Kirkpatrick and Officer Pitt all Give Opinions—Mary Brown Drove Through the Square too Rapidly.

Mary Brown, a chocolate complexioned negro woman, was taxed with the costs by Recorder Smith this morning for exceeding the speed limit, it through Independence Square.

On the stand this morning Officer Pitts gave it as his opinion that the horse was going 20 miles an hour. This was very much doubted by Col. T. L. Kirkpatrick, counsel for the woman, who said he had had a great deal of experience with horses and opined that unless the horse was actually doing its level best it could not be going 20 miles an hour.

"How fast does the average horse go when given free rein, Mr. Pitts?" asked the colonel.
"I don't know, I'm not an expert," replied the officer.

"Well, he couldn't go 20 miles an hour unless he was running away could he?"
"I think so. I wouldn't give much for a horse that couldn't trot 20 miles an hour."

"I think that record has been lowered," said the officer.
Here, what horse are you discussing," interrupted the recorder.
"Well, we are talking about trotting records now," said the colonel.

Well, was the woman driving a pacing or a trotting horse?" asked Judge Smith.
If you are talking of pacing records Dan Patch has them all beat to a frazzle."

"Oh, no," said the colonel, "the horse in question was a trotter and of the Nancy Hanks type."
Here a bull in the dialogue took place, as if there were need of expert testimony as to speed records. Col. Kirkpatrick volunteered that he had had a great deal of experience with horses and was extremely doubtful if the horse could have been making 20 miles per hour.

"I think Mr. Pitts is mistaken about the speed that was made by this woman's horse, although it is talking stepper. I know what I'm talking about, your honor, I've had too much experience along that line."
I expect," said the recorder, "your experience has been mostly with mules, hasn't it, colonel? You worked mules mostly when you lived out in Sharon, didn't you?"

Since it was established that the present speed limit across the square was 5 miles an hour the conclusion of the court was an acceptance of the testimony of Officer Pitts that the speed limit had been violated.
