Nude Body Kidnaped.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 9.—The nude body of 7-year-old Annie Lemberger, who was kidnaped from a bed in her parents' home last Tuesday night, was found in Lake Monona, near here, today.

Superficial examination of the body disclosed no evidence of violence, beyond a slight laceration of one ear and a discoloration on the neck, the latter mark indicating that the child may have been strangled. No weights were on the body, nor were the hands or feet bound in any way.

The only motive for the murder, as far as the case was developed, seems to be revenge on the child's parents by an unidentified enemy.

American Tennis Players Won Honors

New York, Sept. 9.—William A. Larned and Maurice McLoughlin, the American players, won first honors today in the series of matches between the cream of the American tennis players and the pick of the British stars to decide which will travel to Australia to battle for the Davis trophy.

Larned faced Charles P. Dixon, the captain of the Britishers, and won the deciding set. McLoughlin was pitted against Arthur Lowe, and also won his match in the final rally.

The match between Larned and Dixon bordered on the sensational. Larned was cooler than his competitor and his service greatly puzzled his opponent. When the first set was over the advantage perched on Larned's shoulders by a score of 6-3.

In the second clash Dixon warmed to his work and beat Larned 6-3. Larned came right back in the third and gamered the laurels 6-3. Dixon initiated his rival by winning the fourth 6-3.

This left both men tied with the following set to decide the match. Dixon played in superb form, and by masterful work obtained a nice lead of 5 to 2, and it seemed a certainty that he was going to overcome his Yankee rival. Larned then showed his marvelous skill by beautiful placement shots and lightning net work and finished the match victoriously by a tally of 7-5.

In the contest between McLoughlin and Lowe they alternated in the lead and arrived at the crucial set with honors even.

The Californian pulled himself together and managed, by brilliant work, to vanquish Lowe, 6 to 3.

A large crowd watched the international match, despite inclement weather.

Charlie Foust A Ball Player

(By MONTY.) New York, Sept. 9.—His name is Faust and he certainly looks the part—and acts it. Any one who could think of a thing with that handle and at the same time think of baseball must be "off his nut," not to say "moozy."

Yet, he wears a Giant uniform emblazoned with the "strange device" N. Y., and he daily adorns the landscape of the Polo Grounds—the great new Brush Stadium. His first name is Charley, but they call him "Tony."

Thus far he has not received a contract from Johnny McGraw, but he is hoping for Charley Faust has dreamt that he is one day to become a great ball-player.

And thereby hangs a tale. When this big, awkward, slow-footed Kansas farmer awoke on that eventful morning in July, he sat up, rubbed his eyes and then realized all of a sudden that, for his vision to come true, he must be with the Giants—that's what the dream said. So he dug up a National League schedule, ascertained that the Giants were playing in St. Louis and set out to "trek" across the state of Missouri.

McGraw in the quiet old Southern Hotel and immediately set himself to the task at hand. But McGraw would give him no contract. He told him, so which opened the opportunity for Faust to dissertate upon the folly of big league magnates, then argue with McGraw as to the advisability of "taking him on" and finally to right about and arrange the miniature army that had assembled in the lobby to listen to the fun.

McGraw consented to Faust appearing in Giant uniform that afternoon, to show "what he had."

Faust thinks he is a pitcher; others think he is "plumb loco," and both sides are entitled to their opinion. However, he is Charley and did stunts that afternoon in St. Louis and created an extremely "amusing" impression.

In the evening, the Giants were to depart from New York, and Faust had to get his contract then or never, he thought. So he ambushed McGraw again and made another bid. The "little Napoleon" received an inspiration and told Faust that he had forgotten and left the contract in his room in the hotel. "Wait a minute while I go up stairs and get it." Faust waited a minute, several minutes in fact, and the boss didn't show up. Half a dozen hours passed. Disconsolate? Not by a jugfull. Nobody knows how he got there, but Faust was waiting at the entrance to the Polo Grounds when the first Giant showed up for the initial game of the next series in New York. He modestly said "Howdy" to each member of the squad as they filed through the gate and, when McGraw came, last of all, Faust out-loose the over-ready request for a contract.

McGraw saw a chance for some fun. He had discovered that Faust was a "bug" pure and simple and about the biggest one he had ever seen. So he again gave him a Giant uniform and told him to warm up.

Since then, every day, he has performed before the thousands to the delight of all. He slides at the rate of sixty miles a year and pitches with the speed and curves of a pop-gun. Whenever a pitcher is going well, McGraw drags Faust forth from the bench and tells him to warm up. "There may be a sudden blow-up," he says, "and, when a pitcher that is going good blows up, the blow-up is all the more sudden."

Where he learns all his new antics is a mystery, but each afternoon he springs something that he had not sprung before.

McGraw has decided Faust with him on the rest of the Giants' trips on the road, not only to provide amusement and bring in a few extra fans who will pay to see the comedy, but for a bigger and more important reason. Faust may win the pennant for the Giants!

There is a superstition among baseball players that the presence of a "bug" is a good omen. They point to the fact that no team without a mascot or "bug" of some sort hangs around has won a pennant in recent years. Accordingly the Giant players are urging McGraw to give Faust a contract. "Muggsy" will not do that, but he has promised Faust meals and a place to sleep until the end of the season and, if the Giants get much dough from the post-season doings, Faust will receive a neat slice for "plung" for the team.

Faust is queer, but so are the superstitious players. Which is the queerest? Dumco (C. etain srdrdu shrdlu shrdlu).
