FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1911.

DR. WILEY WINS OUT.

It would seem that Dr. Wiley has won a signal victory over all his enemies. This pleasing dispatch tells of the displacement of certain of his enemies.

Dr. Wiley is coming into his own. It is announced that he is to be given full authority in the work of enforcing the pure food act. The dispatch making this announcement says: "In a sudden succession of orders, an initial move in the expected reorganization of the department of agriculture, Solicitor George P. McCabe today was retired from the pure food and drug board, Associate Chemist F. L. Dunlap, closely identified with McCabe, was allowed leave of absence until the President's return, and Chemist Harvey W. Wiley left apparently in supreme command of the board. Mr. R. E. Doolittle, of New York, was temporarily appointed to the board to succeed Mr. McCabe. These changes were announced by Secretary Wilson today following a conference, with Dr. Wiley, who has been on a long vacation. They were deemed inevitable in view of the official and personal antagonism aired before a congressional committee the past summer, and Dr. Wiley's operation by President Taft after Attorney General Wickersham, with views aligned with those of Secretary Wilson and Solicitor McCabe, had recommended Dr. Wiley's removal from office as head of the chemistry bureau because of a technical irregularity in appointive methods, the responsibility for which he denied. In place of Solicitor McCabe to serve with Dr. Wiley on the board, Secretary Wilson appointed Dr. Doolittle, long a member of the bureau of chemistry force, and now head of that bureau substitution in New York. Dr. Wiley and Dr. Doolittle will constitute the majority of the board for the immediate future, the latter's appointment being necessary to give the board's action legal effect. The reasons for Solicitor McCabe's resignation were not announced."

There was a deep laid scheme to oust Wiley. His enemies were made out not only of patent medicine fakes and food fakes, but some of them hold high office. The effort to fire him failed, and despite the recommendations of Attorney General Wickersham and Commissioner Wilson he has received the endorsement of President Taft. In addition the above dispatch would indicate that he has been placed at the head of his department. This is all good to hear and it proves the power of public opinion. Even the president dared not oppose the popular decree in his case.

CHANGES IN OBSERVER COMPANY: An announcement in this morning's Observer of a proposed reorganization and shake-up in staff is of general interest throughout the state. Effective November 1st, Major Hemphill, for many years editor of the Charlotte News and Courier, and for the past two years editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, will become editor, to succeed Mr. Klutz. Mr. Gonzales will become publisher and managing director, and Messrs. Wert Wood and George Stephens will become stockholders. It is said that Mr. D. A. Tompkins will retain stock. Mr. Hemphill, as editor, will keep up the high record set years ago by Mr. Caldwell. He is well known and is an accomplished journalist. Since the retirement of Mr. Caldwell Mr. Klutz has done splendid work. What his plans are we are not told, but we trust he will remain with the paper. By bringing in Mr. Gonzales the Observer Company secures the interest of one of the most influential publishers in the South. In Messrs. Wood and Stephens the support of two progressive business men is secured. The Observer is a good paper, and with the new "Talent" secured it should keep up its good record. We offer congratulations.

Major Hemphill, as new editor of the Observer, will probably relish the task of retracting all those charges filed against the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence in years past.

NEED IMMIGRANTS.

In a Raleigh dispatch Senator Lee S. Overman is quoted as saying he proposes to lend his influence towards having the office of commissioner of immigration created.

If we mistake not such office is provided for. Funds in the agricultural department of the state should be ample to employ such an officer and finance his work.

Certainly one of the greatest needs of the state today is for more immigrants of the first type.

The recent "Back Home" movement, launched in this city, was but the beginning of the great undertaking.

Not only do we need those who have strayed the state, but we need other frugal settlers who will join with us in developing the state's resources.

South Carolina has done a great work through its immigration department, and there is no reason why our own state department of agriculture should not be equally successful in bringing in needed settlers.

FROM OTHER SANCTUMS.....

Windfield Scott Schley was known among naval men as a dashing commander before the war with Spain, while two of his exploits had made him a popular hero. He had disciplined Chinese and Korean coolies, protected the American consulate in San Salvador during a revolution, rescued the survivors of Greeley's expedition in the Arctic and behaved with gallantry and firmness in Valparaiso when American sailors were assailed by a mob. He was in appearance as in fact the typical leader of a fighting force, with his rather Callis features and animated expression.

Capt. Sampson, little known to the public and Schley's junior, was promoted and placed in command of the fleet because of his reputation as a student of strategy. Schley, was in command of the so-called Flying Squadron, and by the accident of Sampson's temporary absence was in immediate charge of the ships that sank Cervera's squadron on July 3. Upon the precise degree of credit due each commander even experts cannot agree.

It is unfortunate that one of the two great naval battles of modern times should have been clouded by the controversy that followed. Perhaps the fact that he was the popular hero of the campaign helped Schley to bear the situation with dignity. No more fitting word upon it was ever pronounced than his own. There was "glory enough for all."—New York World.

Admiral Schley. The most stirring chapters of our nation's history have to do very largely with the lives and exploits of her admirals. Though we have partaken of the sea's romance less fully than England, many of our brightest annals have nevertheless been written upon deck, and in our most recent war it was the navy that struck the telling blow.

Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, who died so suddenly on Monday, will be remembered as one of the most gallant figures among America's hardy sea-fighters. His bearing, his personality, his very name all conspired to make him a rounded type of the wanderer and leader.

It is a curious and interesting fact, as Robert Louis Stevenson has pointed out, that the world's big admirals have borne peculiarly appropriate names. Hawkins and Drake, de Ruyter and, more recently Togo—they seem to have been christened on a purpose to their destiny and so did Schley.

To be sure it would be going too far to class him with the seaman of universal fame or with the greatest of our own records. But for his own time he did work that was truly splendid and permanently useful. Few admirals have been so long in a navy or have covered a broader field of service. His story runs from the arctic to the Caribbean and from constructing work as a teacher to intrepid deeds as a commander.

His personality is well summed up in the words of Admiral Dewey, his veteran comrade: "Admiral Schley was a warm-hearted and chivalrous gentleman. The country has lost a loyal servant and I a dear friend of more than thirty years' standing."—Atlanta Journal.

A Strange Will Of a Lawyer

[The strange will of a young lawyer, who died several years ago in the ward for the insane in the almshouse of Cook county, Illinois. The will was found in his coat. On a resolution of the Chicago Bar Association, the document was sent to probate and so was spread on the records of Cook county.]

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order, as justly as may be, to distribute my interest in the world among those succeeding me:

That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep bound volumes as my property, being inconsiderable and of no account, I make no distribution of in this my will. My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but, these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

Item: I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments, and I charge said parents to use them justly, but generously, as the needs of their children shall require.

Item: I leave to children exclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every flower of the field and blossom of the woods, with the right to play among them freely, according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odor of the willows that dip therein, and the white clouds that float over the giant trees.

And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in a thousand ways, and the night and the train of the milky way to wonder at, but subject, nevertheless, to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.

Item: I devise to boys, jointly, all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played, all pleasant waters where one may swim, all snow-clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate, to hold the same for the period of their boyhood, and all meadows with clover blossoms and butterflies thereof; the woods with their appurtenances, the squirrels and the birds, the echoes and strange noises and all distant places which may be visited, together with the advantages there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with a picture that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance, and without any incumbrance or care.

Item: To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, the stars in the sky, the red roses by the wall, the blossom of the hawthorne, the sweet strains of music and what else that they may desire to figure to each other the lastings and beauty of their love.

Item: To young men, jointly, I devise and bequeath all boisterous and inspiring sports of rivalry and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude, I leave to them the power of making lasting friendships, and of possessing companions, and to them, exclusively, I give all merry songs and grave choruses to sing with lusty voices.

Item: And to those who are no longer children of youths, or lovers, I leave memory, and bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live the old days over again, freely and fully, without tithe or diminution.

Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

Would Reduce Fire Losses. Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 6.—Nashville has inaugurated a movement for the reduction of fire losses by observing a day as fire prevention day when property holders are expected to remove from their premises all trash and refuse that might provide fuel on which fires could be started. Mayor Howse last night set apart October 14 as the date of the first observance.

The Significance of a Name The Stieff Piano

The instrument par excellence. Uniqueness of mechanical art, giving that which is most desired, durability and elegance of appearance, together with its responsiveness to the most delicate touch; its smooth, rich quality of tone enslaving the most classically trained ear; vibrating in beautiful harmony with human heartstrings; and bringing the sweetest melodies to the soul.

These four qualifications, unquestionably, stamp this piano as an unprecedented creation of exquisite completeness. And the Stieff, 'tis true, wears the ribbon blue Grandly wove in its fabric of grace.

'Tis the elegance grand From the skilled workman's hand That gives it its merited place.
