Legislature Asks Union, Journal To Waive Rules

The March 14 meeting of the Student Legislature turned out to be quite lively with several controversial proposals being discussed.

The meeting started off routinely with student body president Gus Psomadakis asking for legislative approval for upcoming student elections and for a new elections committee chairman. Both received unanimous votes from the legislators as did a letter sent to the Chancellor's office by Psomadakis asking that the student legislature be given the power to disburse all student activity fees. The fees are presently disbursed by a committee composed of both student and faculty members.

Things warmed up quickly, however, with the student body president's request that the election of the editor of the Carolina Journal be suspended "indefinitely" until such time as a publications board could be formed. This request was amended "in toto" asking that election of the editor upon a motion by Tim Britton, be held at the same time as the election of the executive council of the student body. This motion was passed by a vote of 18 for and 4 opposed. As a result of this action nominations for editor of the Journal will be open until March 30.

After the disposition of the matter concerning the suspension of the election of the editor, Sam Scott moved that the Student Legislature recommend to the editor of the Carolina Journal that the qualifications for that office be waived for the upcoming election.

The objectionable qualifications appear in the newspaper's constitution and require that a student seeking election as editor of the paper have served one prior semester in some capacity as a member of the Journal organization. This recommendation was passed after a hot discussion by a vote of 17 for and 10 against.

The next item of business considered by the body was the granting of a charter to the "Judo and Kung-Fu Society." This was done by a unanimous vote.

The legislature had received a request from the University Union asking that the Union be allowed to suspend the qualifications for election for the posts of Vice-Chairman, secretary, and Treasurer of the Union for the upcoming election. The legislature voted to return this request to the Union Governing Board along with a recommendation that the qualifications for Chairman also be waived.

The legislature also passed an amendment to the "Student Legislature Reorganization Act of May 1965" which defined and extended the powers of the various legislative committees.

The final action taken by the group was to request the Student Affairs Committee to check into the possibilities of securing special parking spaces for members of the executive council of the student body.

Our 'Dr. Bonnie' Will Stay As Vice-Chancellor, Mathematics Professor

Dr. Bonnie Cone

Dr. Bonnie E. Cone has announced her intentions to stay with the institution which owes its very existence to her.

"Miss Bonnie," as her students have called her since the institution's humble beginnings in the old Central High school building in 1949, has accepted the position of vice-chancellor of student affairs and community relations. Dr. Cone's decision as to whether or not she would accept or decline the position had been expected since the University board of trustees decided on Dr. Dean W. Colvard as the school's first chancellor.

Only several weeks ago Miss Cone told this reporter that the decision to stay or not to stay was a very difficult one for her to make because she "felt that old heads should leave as soon as the new head is well settled." She added that she had been urged by many of her friends to stay on and that this conflict was one she would have to consider carefully before she made any final decision.

When the trustees announced the selection of Dr. Colvard for the chancellorship they also offered Dr. Cone the position of vice-chancellor but Miss Cone felt she "could not accept the position (at that time) because I wanted Dr. Colvard to be able to pick his own staff. This (offer by the trustees) meant a great deal to me (but) I wanted him (Colvard) to want me."

Dr. Cone will also receive a full professorship in the math department even though she does not think she will be able to do any actual teaching next year. As the pressures of the vice-chancellorship ease in the years to come, "I really do hope I can get back into some teaching. I do love teaching," said Miss Cone, who has taught mathematics in Carolina's high schools and at Duke University as well as with Charlotte College.

Concerning her new position Dr. Cone said she has "always enjoyed a close association with students and I feel that I know their problems . . . and I am looking forward to an opportunity to work more closely with them (the students). Dr. Cone expressed regrets that the majority of her recent time has had to be spent with other problems which are confronting the newest branch of the University ("one of them is money") and has had to restrict her relationship with her students.

In announcing Miss Cone's acceptance of the position, Dr. Colvard stated that Miss Cone would be "a major participant in an administrative team to guide the affairs of the institution as it develops." During a meeting with student leaders

Prospective Teachers Score High

A survey of National Teacher Examination scores indicates that the first group of teachers trained at the newest branch of the University system ranked quite high.

The group of students was composed of thirty completing work in the spring of 1965 and two completing their work here at the end of the past fall semester.

The UNC-C average score on the examination was 649.3, according to Dr. Phillip Vairo, associate professor of education. The scores ranged from a low of 493 to a high of 786 which was in the 99th percentile.

The state and national averages were topped by the local students. The state average was 573 and the national was 603.
