

Buckingham Palace Ugly, Shore Patrol Is Friendly

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two part series of articles dealing with the European adventures of UNC-C students Phyllis Henline and Nelson Lemmond this summer.

Phyllis Henline

By Libby Holshouser
Every summer some students are lucky enough to make that ever-exciting trip abroad. There are several such students here at our own University. We were interested in their comments concerning the sights and sounds of countries, foreign to the United States.

As the person assigned the task of interviewing these students, I was faced with the problem of not knowing exactly what questions to ask. My problem was solved to a great extent when I discovered that one of the students had kept a day-by-day account of her trip.

The following are some refreshing, new slants of a tourists view of Europe, from the memoirs of Phyllis Henline, who spent ten weeks touring.

"Saw Westminster Abbey, Big Ben, Parliament Buildings, and Buckingham Palace -- ugly. Saw Thames. Rested in St. James Park."

"Ate poissons fruit-- 80¢. Had to parlez francais in restaurant."

"After five changes, got to Brussels. Walked a mile to hostel. Beautiful hostel. Everyone spoke English."

"Got on ship to Gotburg, Sweden-- ship was Princess Desiree. Plush, lounges, cafe, cassino, bar, etc."

"Ate spaghetti at Italian Restaurant -- 60¢ 'Strangers in the Night' on juke box."

"Went to zoo. Shot animals of interest in zoo (ed. trans. :Took pictures of animals of interest). Ate lunch with tea and walked to Carlsburg Breweries. Took free tour of breweries--from beginning to end-- Malt, Brewing, fermentation, aging, bottling, and learned all the processes--very interesting. Had all free bear we could drink--which was only one."

"Walked thru Copenhagen streets. Very big, bright, and exciting. People stay up all night long. Music everywhere, people dancing and laughing. Very pleasant and happy city. Only one thing indecent--street shops filled with pornography in forms of books pictures and even slides."

"Had serenade by some guy, playing auto harp or zither-- Very good until he started to sing."

"Caught 8:30 train to either Zurich or Basel. Haven't decided yet. Great train--may sleep some."

"Music and dancing everywhere.

Salvation Army Service on street at 8:30. Unusual."

"Saw many Americans here -- even translated French menu for boy from Kentucky -- very nice kid."

"Saw primitive farming methods burrows with packs, etc. on way to Malago--only beginning more modern irrigation systems."

Had paella for lunch; consisted of rice, chickens feet, pimento, peppers, clams, lobster and other non-descript items. Good but not great."

"Jumped from train into ditch. Looked worse than the devil -- waled into apartment area, selected best hotel we could fin."

"Shore patrol on beach when we came out. Very friendly."

"Rode all over Lyon looking for cigarettes."

"Before dinner, went to Chateau de Blois--in very bad shape."

"Walked thru old town of St. Malo. Streets packed with tourists. Saw old church that had been bombed--gives Wierd sensation."

"Walked to Cathedral of Notre Dame. Most beautiful cathedral I've seen yet. Stained glass windows magnificent."

"Visited some fort used by Mussolini which was in ruins. Went to Roman Forum for impressive presentation of sound and lights which gave entire history of Rome. Saw Fountain of Treiu(Three Coins in a Fountain, fountain). We threw in two coins. Legend: one coin, you'll come back to Rome; two coins: you'll get married in Rome. three coins: You'll get divorced in Rome."

"Had breakfast in Constitution Square--tea and croissant. Went to gift shops and had lunch below Acropolis. Ate green salad and stuffed vine leaves. Went to Acropolis, saw Parthenon, Temple of Athena Nike, and visited museum. Most impressive single sight I've seen."

"Funniest thing--natives change clothes on beach with back to water. Go from swim suits to stark nakedness and then to full dress--men and women alike. Simply amazing. No one seems to notice.

Next week, watch for comments by Nelson Lemmond on his trip abroad. At that time, find out where he encountered Phyllis Henline in Europe.

Lincoln Had Beard Before Newman's Mother Had Blades

By Corny Stilwell

Yesterday I saw an advertisement in a newspaper that introduced the latest in men's toiletry. The new "bare look" for men in fashion.

What exactly is the "bare look"? As far as I could determine, it's the new colorless lipstick for men. Now, there is a chapstick which looks like a tube of lipstick but this isn't a new chapstick! It's odorless, smear-proof and water repellent! What's more it's for men. And it's designed to give your smackers a lean and hungry look.. boy, you'd be lean and hungry for a long time around me.

The first time I caught some fellow sneaking in his pocket and pulling out a tube of lipstick to smear on his kisser....well, that would be enough for me.

Righ next to this "bare look" advertisement was a Want Ad column and immediately my eyes caught the ad which read, "MAN WANTED! Must produce Credentials." How ironic that the editor should place this ad next to the "bare look" advertisement. The older I get, the harder it is for me to remember when almost everyone had the clean-shaven, tailored-shirt look.

Everyone has that "pinched" look (males). They impress me as acting as though they'd just eaten a lemon. The reason for their expression comes from the fact that they have on such tight pants that their blood circulation in their legs has been severed. Years ago you would have blamed that "pinched" look on tight shoes----times do change.

As for the clean-shaven look, five years ago only beatniks had beards, now everyone who swings (from trees) is growing one. If men were intended to have beards, why would Paul Newman's mother have invented the razor-blade?

At least Paul's mother was able to convince him that he looked better with hair on the top of his head instead of all the way around it. Of course, some young men insist upon arguing that all the great men in our history had beards. That may be true, but no one's written a book on why they had them.

Abraham Lincoln, one of our greatest statesmen is pictured with a beautiful black beard. But the way that I look at it, if you're nearly 7 feet tall, who's going to be able to see whether you've must shaved or not. It's not those 7 feet tall men who bug you, it's those 5'9" with the beard they can wrap around their pinkies who'll bother you. It nearly drives me crazy to sit behind one of these guys in class and have to watch them wind their breads around their pinkie and then wind it again and unwind it and wind it again.....When the bell finally rings for the next class, I'm so glad to be away from the fellow that I fairly run to class and who do I find sitting in front of me? Curly Beard himself. (He's wound and unwound his beard so many times that he's put a natural kink in it).

Beards seem to be present on guys with the short hair. I'd rather see that than the guys with the smooth face and the hair down their shirts and even their eyes.

They have curlers and clips for setting their mops. Then they've designed a specially made teasing comb for styling. After styling, there is the special hair spray.

To me, there is nothing more displeasing than to see a girl with a bouffant hairdo and be able to see the teasing which hasn't been combed over. But to see a boy with a "hairdo" which probably wouldn't fit under a bushel basket is overwhelming.

Clothes, too, are picking the boys from the men. (But they are more than that, they're making it possible to distinguish the men from the women.) The men are the ones who wear the long pants. The women wear the short skirts.

As I said, the older I get, the harder it is to accept the new fads. Hope that skirts don't get too much shorter....at least, if they do, I hope that my legs get a little longer.

PRAM Will Entertain Eight Visiting Ecuadorians Soon

BY SALLY HAGOOD

The UNC-C branch of PRAM will entertain eight Ecuadorian students who are presently visiting the Eastern coast of the United States on Wednesday, October 5, at 11:30. All students are invited to attend the open discussion and reception in the Union whether they speak Spanish or not. The Ecuadorian students speak fluent English and are anxious to discuss any topic with American Students.

A similar group of students visited the UNC - C campus last year and they were found to be a charming and lively representation of their countries.

PRAM is an international organization which operates completely on private funds. No political, economic or social concern forms the backbone of PRAM for the group was started by University students and has been maintained by students during its two years of existence.

The organization began at Davidson College in North Carolina and now has branches throughout North and South America. International headquarters are located at Davidson and Quito, Ecuador.

PRAM believes that personal contact is the only way to learn about people and their problems. Therefore, they sponsor a student exchange between North and South America as well as between one South American country and another. Any University student is considered for an exchange regardless of his political or social beliefs.

This past summer American students, including several from UNC-C, visited Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru.
