

Two Conferences Planned International Affairs Topic

By RONNIE FOSTER

International Affairs will be the theme of two conferences to be held on this campus February 28 and 29 and March 1.

The Role of Universities' Professional Schools in International Affairs" will be the topic for discussion at a two day conference to be held February 28-29. The plans for this conference were laid down at a meeting represented by deans from universities in the Southeast.

Plans are also being drawn for UNC-C campus University Forum on March 1 on the theme, "The University and International Politics."

Both conferences are expected to bring outstanding national and international figures to this campus. Although there has been no mention of names yet. The planning committee for professional schools conference has named Dr. W. Hugh McEniry, Vice-chancellor for academic affairs, as its chairman.

Education and World Affairs Association, which was represented Wednesday by its vice-president, Dr. Irwin D. Sanders will sponsor the conference. Education and World Affairs is a national, non-profit educational organization whose purpose it is to study, analyze, and assist in international teaching, research and service dimensions of American universities and colleges. The Ford and Carnegie Foundations are its main benefactors.

The professional schools of engineering, law, business, and public administration, agriculture, medicine, and public health, and education will be represented at the conference by the Southeastern universities.

Chancellor D. W. Colvard says that it is his understanding that the purpose of the conference is to be a convening of representatives of professional schools from throughout the Southeast to discuss their understanding of the university's role in world affairs as based on studies published by Education and World Affairs.

Among the problems the educators indicated interest in is the problem of bringing the foreign student out of his culture into the culture of the United States and then preparing him for reentry into his own culture. Another of these problems deals with getting the benefit from student and faculty involvement abroad by putting their experiences into curriculum patterns. Getting the average American student concerned with international affairs was also mentioned as a major purpose of the conference.

Plans for the University Forum Council have not taken definite shape beyond the selection of the topic and the sending of exploratory letters to possible speakers. Mrs. Edyth Winningham, professor emerita at UNC-C is the Forum Chairman.

Everything in both conferences should provide a wide range of interesting speakers and information which should be beneficial to all.

Dr. Hugh McEniry, Chairman of the planning committee for a two day conference to be held here February 28-29, speaks at a meeting held on campus recently to discuss conference plans.

APO Initiates Eight Into Brotherhood

By RODNEY SMITH

Last week UNC-C's chapter, Sigma Upsilon, of Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity received eight new members into the brotherhood. The new members went through an informal initiation last Friday night and were inducted into the fraternity at a formal ceremony Saturday night. Dave Taylor, Bill Taylor, Roland DeLoach, Rod Smith, Fred Jordan, Mike Wood, James Saunders, and Larry Kirkpatrick went through a pledge program that began last March and included several commendable service projects. An ice skating outing for Thompson orphans, volleyball courts for the school's intramural program, a turkey shoot for a scholarship fund, a car smash, and FAC are among the credits to the '67 pledge class.

With the graduation into brotherhood of Sigma Upsilon's first pledge class begin a new rush program by the fraternity. All campus men who have had some affiliation with scouting or YMCA work and fun are prospective rushees and are invited to be alert for announcements concerning the next Alpha Phi Omega meeting open to newcomers.

Hogan Speaker For UN Day Observance Here

Dr. Loy H. Witherspoon, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee for UN Day Observance announced on Monday, October 16, that Dr. Charles Hogan would be the speaker for the campus observance of UN Day. Professor Hogan is Visiting Professor of Political Science at Drew University, formerly Acting Secretary of the Social and Economic Council of the United Nations, and a veteran of twenty-one years of service with the U.N. The campus observance will be held Friday, October 20 in the University Union. Dr. Hogan's appearance on campus is being sponsored by several campus organizations.

All members of the university community are invited to hear Dr. Hogan speak on the theme, "The UN Works for Peace." The program will begin with an informal coffee hour at 10:30. It is open to the public. Following the speech, an opportunity will be given for questions and answers.

Later Friday Professor Hogan and some of the faculty of UNC-C will join with the staff of WTVI for a video-tape of a panel to be aired on the local educational TV station's series "Focus." Those participating on the panel in addition

(Continued on page 2)

Michie Newly Chosen

George B. Michie, Jr. had been named assistant director of admissions, Dr. Bonnie E. Cone, vice chancellor for student affairs and community relations, announced today.

Michie comes to this campus from a position as director of general adult and extension education and community services at Randolph Technical Institute at Asheboro.

He holds the bachelor of business administration degree from Clarkson College of Technology at Potsdam, New York, and the master of education degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He has held positions as principal and teacher of Glade Valley School, as director youth work and Christian education at First Presbyterian Church at Waynesboro, Va., and as sales representative for United States Gypsum Company in Chicago. He is married and has three children.

Roy's Paintings Enjoyed In Union

By SONNIA MIZZELL

The art exhibit of Miss Tina Roy being displayed in the Union lounge has been generally enjoyed by the students at UNC-C. Miss Roy paints pictures which are pleasing to the eye. However, it is evident that she paints not for the esthetics of painting, but primarily to sell.

Miss Roy's strongest point is her use of vivid colors with excellent contrast. But this point is overshadowed by her repetition of ideas. She seems to use a good idea in one painting, then proceed to use it again in another. Two such paintings, "Towers of Trade" and another unnamed one, are interesting paintings that should have been hung separately. Taking a close look at the two, it is impossible not to recognize that they are almost the exact same painting except for the color. Another example of this repetition is "As-tral Voyage" painted in blue and black, and "Twin Towns" done in red and black. Again these two pictures are almost identical.

Miss Roy does use a different effect in several of her paintings. A few of them resemble watercolors rather than oil paintings. Also, there is a group of good Spanish paintings that resemble pastel drawings.

One painting that this reporter particularly likes is "Executive Retreat." This picture gives the viewer a sense of tremendous space inside the square containing the house and surrounding land. But, then, looking outside the square there is an even greater expanse of space that dwarfs the area inside the square. The picture is one that pursues much thought.

Miss Roy's paintings are bold and appealing. Several of them have been purchased by faculty members and students.

