

Annual UNC-C Forum On International Relations

Three authorities on international relations will participate in the third annual University Forum here March 1, 1968.

The topic for the Forum will be "The University and International Relations: The Challenge of Tomorrow."

The three are Dr. Fred Sondermann, professor international relations at the Colorado College at Colorado Springs, Colorado; Dr. Fred Warner Neal, professor of government and international relations at the Claremont Graduate School in California; and Professor Lucian Pye, professor of political science at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A fourth participant is still being sought.

Library

Handbook

Has New Info

The 1967-68 edition of the J. Murrey Atkins Library Handbook has been issued and is now available to students and faculty.

The new edition includes much new information which has not appeared in either of the last two editions of the Handbook. To illustrate, information relating to the Library's curriculum materials file and the audio-visual collection, both begun during the past year, is included.

Basic information concerning the card catalog, University archives, U. S. and U. N. documents, periodicals, Caroliniana collection, photoduplication of library materials, and interlibrary loan is included in the Handbook.

A full page is devoted to an outline of the Library of Congress classification system, which is used in classifying all books and periodicals in the Atkins Library.

Examples of entries in Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature and the New York Times Index are also included.

Floor plans for each of the Library's two floors showing location of resources and facilities are reproduced on the inside covers of the Handbook.

Quotations pertinent to books and libraries are interspersed throughout the sixteen page guide to library resources and services.

Copies of the Handbook are available to any student or faculty member at the reference and circulation desks in the Atkins Library.

Disagreement-

are appropriate and in order. Indeed, from my point of view, their presence is desirable and beneficial.

Second, I think it is Mr. Smith's major premise that disagreement with the faculty and/or administration entails hostile sentiments or emotions. This is completely false. Students possess sufficient maturity to disagree with others, including administration and faculty, without impugning their motives.

Although I do not know the faculty members and administrators Mr. Smith mentioned, I do believe they, along with others in their capacity, are deserving of his favorable comments. But since they have never been under attack by anyone I know of, then subsequently they do not need a defense, either from Mr. Smith or anyone else. Thank you.

Very truly yours,

Forum programs dealt with "The Urban University and the Development of the Modern City" and "The Urban University and the Arts."

Dr. Nish Jamgotch, program chairman for the March Forum said the reason for dealing with international relations this time is that in his opinion, "Universities have primarily addressed themselves to problems of international relations in retrospect.

There is a real need for the nation's intellectuals to peer over the horizon and try to understand the potential problems of tomorrow. There is no denying that forewarned is forearmed," he said.

Mrs. Edyth Winningham, retired professor of political science at UNC-C, is chairman of the University Forum Council, which is composed of representatives of the community, the student body, the faculty, and the administration.

Dr. Sondermann, who holds the Ph.D. from Yale, is a long-time specialist in the theories of international relations. He is author of a college textbook, "The Theory and Practice of International Relations," in addition to numerous other scholarly publications. He will discuss "The Intellectual and the Policy Maker."

Dr. Neal is a former intelligence expert in the U. S. State Department and later a correspondent for the Wall Street Journal. He is known for articles on Yugoslavia and for numerous written criticisms of American foreign policy.

Dr. Pye is known primarily for his research on the politics of underdeveloped areas.
