Meeting Of Club Devoted To International Affairs

There will be a meeting today, at 11:30, of all students interested in forming a UNC-C chapter of the Council on International Relations and United Nations Affairs

(CIRUNA). The meeting will be in room U-209. CIRUNA is the result of the merger of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations (CCUN), and the Association of International Relations Clubs (AIRC). A "non-profit, non-partisan," national student organization, it is "devoted to the creation of knowledgeable and informed opinion both within and outside the academic community on issues of international affairs; to the building of informed and intelligent public support of the United Nations; for the principles in its Charter and in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; and for the advancement of peace based on justice and freedom."

Seminar Explorers

The University Counseling Service is planning to conduct a series of seminars which will provide students with an opportunity to explore various concerns that they must cope with in college.

The initial seminar will begin during the first week of February and meet one hour a week for six weeks. This session will be a Study Skills Lab in which the individual will be assisted in developing effective use of his academic skills. The general objective of the Lab will be to aid individuals who are dissatisfied with their classroom performances and to show effective students ways of being more effective.

Anyone interested in the Study Skills Lab should contact Miss Anderson, Mr. Peterson or Dr. Simono at the Counseling Service. Enrollment in the first six week session will be limited. However, if a large number of students show an interest in the Lab, more groups will be organized.

SNEA, ACEI Give Party For Nursery Children

Children of South Tryon Presbyterian Church Nursery enjoyed a party given to them by this campus' chapter of Student National Education Association and the as yet unchartered Association of Childhood Education International.

Four members of the clubs were on hand to supervise the party at which the children played games, sang Christmas songs, and listened to Christmas records. Mrs. Gwen Spratt, president of ACEI, Geraldine Ledford, vice-president of ACEI, Kathleen Ledford, chairman of the Christmas Party Project and Mrs. Eileen Purut presented each child with a Golden Book donated by Dixie News Service. Money donations by the faculty and students were used to purchase large Golden Books, a Bible book, and other books for the nursery's use.

Toys, stuffed animals, and games were also donated for gifts for the children.

Enough books and refreshments (kool-aid, cookies, candy, and cupcakes) were left to enable the twenty-five children who were home sick with the flu to enjoy a party the week after Christmas.

It is vital that UNC-C form its chapter soon so that it may send a delegation to Chapel Hill in March for a model U. N. session. There, the club would represent a country in a true life situation. Besides the U. N. model sessions, the charter clubs are invited to visit the U. N. and are given special attention. With little need for finance, only interest is necessary - so get with it 49ers.

Low Cost Flights Offered To Students, Faculty, Staffs

For the seventh year, low cost, "group fare" flights to Europe will be available to all students, employees, and staff of the Consolidate University of North Carolina.
