Frigg, Harry P., Is More Clod-like Luke

A JOURNAL REVIEW

By F. N. STEWART

Frigg, Harry P. Is one of those movies which has to be seen. Never-mind those dirty adult pictures and nevermind those silly family movies, Harry Frigg is the one to see. Paul Newman is the hero, and the Germans as the bad guys. But it's not actually a war movie even if it does have a war setting and has soldiers in uniform. At least I don't remember anybody even being shot. I do remember Harry Frigg being shot at by the guards of the stockade. Ole Harry is chosen to rescue five generals from the Italian "stockade". Harry is chosen because of his superior record -- eighteen escapes from an American stockade in little over a year's time. Harry is a buck private, but Homer, a real general, makes Harry a Brigadier General so that Harry can "rescue" the other five generals.

Harry finds out he doesn't really know much about being a General. So who should come to his aid to help him be a good general, you probably guessed it, the tender young Duchess.

Newman plays the role of Harry Frigg in just about the same manner he played Cool Hand Luke. Only Harry is just a little bit more of a clod than Luke. But, with the tender young Duchess' help, Harry turns into a real good clod. The tactics he uses, in manipulating the other Generals are blundersome, but effective. The antics that he goes through and the wit which he uses are true Newman-style.

The nation of Israel was re-established as a republic in 1948.

Italy's largest seaports are Genoa, Naples, Venice, Trieste, Ancona, Bari, Brindisi and Palermo.

This is where the real fun begins, Paul Newman (with his dreamy blue eyes, or so my date said), alias Harry Frigg, is cool as only Paul can be cool in playing the role of a semi-clod. Ole Harry gets himself captured by the Italians and is put with the other five generals who are being held in the country estate of an Italian Duchess. Now this isn't just any old Duchess, but a young tender thing, who immediately catches General Frigg's eye. So the problem is compounded as Old Harry has to worry about escaping, but yet doesn't really want to leave this tender young Duchess. More problems arise as

Bi-centennial Chorus To Give Concert April 28 Here

On Sunday afternoon of April 28 at 3:00 the Bi-Centennial Chorus of 93 voices under the direction of Harvey Woodruff will present its second full concert of music entirely by Charlotte composers in the Parquet Room of the Student Union. 29 students from the two choral groups at UNC-C are participating in this venture, and Dorothy Bovard, accompanist for these two choruses, will be at the piano.

The Bi-Centennial Chorus was formed at the beginning of this anniversary year for the express purpose of presenting music entirely by Charlotte composers. 11 different composers are represented, among them two from UNC-C. Dr. William Mathis, Chairman of the Fine Arts Department has written a "Prayer for the Dedication of a House of Worship," with words beginning "Surely, the Lord is in this place." A new setting of "The Lord's Prayer" was composed especially for this program by Bernard Lewis, UNC-C junior, and it will be sung by UNC-C special student, Bonnie Smith, soprano, with Woodruff as conductor. This makes a total of 6 UNC-C faculty and students who carry leading roles in this community presentation.

It is hoped that these concerts will indicate to the city of Charlotte some measure of its creative activity in the realm of music. 8 out of the 14 selections will be performed from manuscript. They may serve also as an encouragement to other musicians who wish to compose.

Additional concerts will be presented on Sunday, May 5, 3:00 p.m. at First Methodist Church; Tuesday, May 7, 8:00 p.m., Enderly Park Baptist Church, and on Tuesday May 14, 8:00 p.m. Myers Park Presbyterian Church.

The public is invited without charge.
