

A.C.U.I. Games Tournament

Dan Ewing Wins Bowling Crown

The Association of College Unions-International Tournaments were held on campus last week on February 21, 22, and 23. Ten colleges participated in the various games which included chess, billiards, bridge, table tennis, and bowling. UNC-C proved to be so successful as a centralized campus for the participating schools that the tournament may be held here again next year.

The three days were busy ones for the players. They met many new people, spent long hours over bridge tables, bowling lanes, tennis tables, pool tables, and chess boards, and attended the Green Garter Coffee House.

The chess tournaments were the only ones that began Thursday night. A general meeting of the players was held Friday morning at 8:00 after which all games began. UNC-C was the only participating school to enter all events.

The results of the tournaments were as follows:

Many students from UNC-C participated but special recognition should be made to Danny Ewing who won the overall events in bowling. Danny won a trip to Madison Wisconsin in April to compete in the National Bowling Tournaments. The women's national tournament will be held in May in San Diego, California.

The people who organized the Region V 1969 tournaments were Gail Clay of U.T., Dean McKay, Howard Winnamen, and Bob Welch of UNC-C

Miss Berry, Miss Smith, Miss Scoggins, Miss Vaughan, Miss Gallant, Miss Feuer, Miss Drake, and Miss Raley -- finalists in the Miss UNC-C Contest this year.

Black Caucus Promotes Unrest

By R.T. Smith

Now what? The UNC-C "black caucus" has now come out in favor of the War in Viet Nam. They have taken sides with the communist forces in Southeast Asia on the strength of the idea that no Vietnamese has ever called them "niggers." That's really rich, you know? This "black caucus" has done more on the UNC-C campus to promote animosity between the races than any other organization or non-organization. This group is the personification of racial hatred and bigotry. All they can think is black. They automatically ascribe poor attitudes to every white person they meet. It isn't helping. So many people on this campus are doing every thing that they can to help equalize racial attitudes, but the black caucus is pulling the races apart. But isn't it neat the way they wear all black? And wasn't that a real keen black flag that they hoisted up on the flag pole one fine day? This is certainly no manifestation of the humanist ideal of brotherly love - that's not what they want. They just want to take over. "We support the revolution." They support any revolution, as long it causes confusion and disharmony. Is this the attitude of the blacks on this campus, or is it just the feelings of those who can shout the loudest? I invite a reply from someone who knows.

Miss UNC-C To Be Elected By Student Body

A panel of judges representing the campus' student organizations interviewed twenty-nine young ladies last week in order to select eight finalists in the fourth annual Miss UNC-C Contest. The judges made their decision on the basis of looks, charm, poise, and campus activities. Miss UNC-C will represent the Charlotte branch in the Miss Consolidated University contest next fall and at several other campus and community functions.

Last year's winner, Miss Louise Napolitano, will crown the new queen at a formal dance in her honor this Saturday night at eight o'clock, in the Parquet Room. The other two former Miss UNC-Cs, Miss Kay Troutman and Miss Earleen Mabry, are still on campus. Miss Troutman is a senior, and Miss Mabry is employed by the admissions office. The eight finalists are judged in a student body election this week. All students are eligible to vote; ballots are available at the Union desk. In order to vote, a student must present his I.D. card. The eight finalists are Miss Donna Raley, a sophomore English major; Miss Sherry Drake, a junior history major; Miss Bobbe Berry, a junior history major; Miss Barbara Jean Smith, a sophomore Sociology major; Miss Debbie Feuer, a freshman English Educa. major; Miss Dianne Vaughan, a sophomore French major; Miss Paula Jean Gallant, a freshman Nursing major and Miss Dianne Scoggins junior English major
