Students Have Many Ways Of Spending Summer Vacations

By TONDA TAYLOR

Do you ever wonder just how all the other fellows spend their summer vacations? CC students spend their summers in a variety of ways. One student spent last summer working on a pit crew for a racing friend. Another won the North Carolina State Equitation Championship. Some traveled in Europe while others "blazed trails at the beach." The Collegian interviewed different students to find out how they spent some recent summers. Here are some of the ways:

Carole Bleimeyer— "I remember the parties most. That summer, I was staying in Palm Beach. One of those parties, well it wasn't a party — it was THE Party . . . with a wonderful combo playing on the beach, exotic foods, liquors and people. Only later did we realize that the caretaker's daughter threw the party while the owners of the estate were in Europe."

Hoot Gibson — "I went to California and worked for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and "recreated" the rest of the time. What a place with snow and water skiing, skin diving, night clubbing . . . and so forth. I also worked on a pit crew for a racing friend of mine."

Bob Andrews— "I was in the army and was sent that summer to northern Japan — I went by ship's rail. I remember most the wonderful Japanese people."

Harry Holden — "Last summer, I had three jobs — working in a machine shop from 8 till 5, Monday through Friday. Monday through Thursday evenings, I built fallout shelters. Weekends, I worked at McDonald's dressing hamburger buns 36 to a batch."

Lucinda Mason — "From Geneva I went to Ireland, where I lived for three weeks in a castle. Then I went to London for two weeks, Germany for a month, and the rest of the summer I traveled through the Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and France."

Pete Futrell — "One summer, some boys and I lived on an island in the Catawba. We mixed our drinks with river water to save our money for gas and food."

Richard Bowers — "Well, I played Route 66 last summer with a friend. We roared out West in my Corvette, sleeping on, in or near the car. We worked as filling station attendants, dishwashers, waiters, and national park attendants."

Eric George — "In the summer of 1959, all the horses I had that year were really doing great. I entered jumping events in horse shows on an average of every weekend and won the North Carolina State Equitation Championship."

Jean Hudgins — "It was the summer we had a jeep at the beach. We spent our time roaring around blazing trails through private estates and flying over the tops of sand dunes."

Jimmy Howie — "As a member of North Carolina Methodist Caravan, I lived last summer in England, Germany, and Austria with native families. We spoke to various youth groups in many European countries."

Editor Teaches CC Journalism

Journalism is being offered at CC again this semester. The class meets from 7 to 9 each Tuesday night in room L210. DeWitt Scott, assistant managing editor of The Charlotte News, teaches the course.

It is a practical course in newspaper organization and procedures and aims to give the student a general background of the function of a newspaper and to teach the fundamentals of journalistic writing.

The course is not directed solely for those students who plan to enter journalism. It can be beneficial for anyone who desires a liberal or well-rounded education.

The required work for the course is done within class time in an informal method of lecture and discussion. The "laboratory" for the class is The Collegian, the college's monthly newspaper.

A five dollar textbook, sold by the bookstore, is required for the course. One semester hour credit is given. It is not too late to register in the office for journalism.

Ronnie Greene Named To Conference Honor

Ronnie Greene, 6'3" center for the Charlotte College basketball team, was named to the Carolina-Virginia Junior College all-conference basketball team.

Greene was awarded his trophy during the conference tournament in Louisburg.

Wilmington placed three men on the all conference team and Louisburg one.

This is Greene's last season with the Owls. Last year he was the leading scorer and rebounder for the team, averaging 18.5 points per contest.

This year Greene averaged

Horne Files For Commissioner

paign on a "get moving" issue.

Horne is a part-time employe of the Charlotte Observer and a pre-law student at CC. He said he plans to conduct an active campaign for the office. "I'm in this race to win," he said emphatically. "Full speed ahead!"

Horne, who is a resident of Matthews, said he feels that the county commissioners move too slowly, and that it's time to "sell" Mecklenburg County, which he feels will be the industrial center of the South.

He said he felt that the county's welfare program is "overdone," and that cases should be more closely researched.

New Student Gives Talk For CCUN

By GEORGE THOMAS

Abraham Bedwan, a native of Jordan and a new student at Charlotte College, spoke to the Charlotte College CCUN at its February 29 meeting.

Bedwan's topic was his native land, the Middle East, with special reference to Jordan and its problems. He mentioned Jordan's long-standing dispute with Israel.

"Please don't think that we hate the Jews. We do not hate the Jews," Bedwan said. "Our quarrel is with the Zionists."

Bedwan described the Zionists as "a belligerent people who are protected under the guise of Judaism." But most Jews are against the Zionists' tactics, he said.

"Abe" Bedwan is a Political Science or Business Administration major. He attended Wilmington College last semester.

Bedwan has been in this country four years.

"And next year I'll receive my citizenship papers," he proudly announces.
