

Miss Bonnie

There's a tence excitement that goes through the human body and soul when the person is honored as being the most distinguished from some elite group. And there's an almost equal excitement that releases itself in people who are very special friends of the honored person.

The first experience happened Saturday night, May 22 in Asheville, as the North Carolina Civitan Club awarded their annual Distinguished Citizenship Award to Dr. Bonnie Cone. The latter happened the next day to hundreds of Charlotte College students as they learned of the award.

Dr. Cone is a very special friend of every student on this campus. We had that latter feeling and we think most other Charlotte College students did.

And we couldn't agree more with the North Carolina Civitan Club.

Let's Have A Contest

Despite our dislike for contests to give a certain upcoming university a good rough tough nick name and despite our dislike for contests in general we are going to sponsor one.

The name of said contest will be as follows: NAME THE STUDENT NEWSPAPER FOR THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHARLOTTE AND THE YEAR-BOOK OF SAME UNIVERSITY.

The reason for this contest is that there is a strong feeling around campus that "Charlotte Collegian" won't be appropriate since the institution it serves will no longer be Charlotte College. We agree. But we want to hear what the students think.

Thus a contest.

The rules are simple. In some manner place on one (1) piece of paper a name that you think should be good to call the paper. Leave it in the Collegian box at the College Union desk.

If you think the name ought to remain Charlotte Collegian you may say so by writing "Charlotte Collegian" on a piece of paper.

We're going to try to come out weekly next year, so keep that in mind.

Si Si (pronounced ce ce, in case you didn't know), the year-book, is in the same predicament. Leave suggestions for them in our box and we'll pass 'em on.

Good luck.

Viet Nam

Charlotte College students heard Monday, May 17, one side of the argument over the United States' military presence in the war torn country of South Viet Nam. That side was, of course, the side of the United States state department.

Turner Shelton is obviously a skilled speaker. He expressed his views of the above mentioned presence clearly and consistently. He is also a skilled player at the game question and answer, which he played at for over an hour.

The students and faculty of Charlotte College proved to be a audience, also. They laughed at the introductory joke, applauded at spots, and in general kept well on their toes.

They, also, proved to be good players at the question and answer game. Intelligent questions were thrown at Mr. Shelton time after time.

All this goes to show that the people around Charlotte College aren't as slow and apathetic as one might think and complaints from various bodies (including The Collegian) about student disinterest are not totally well grounded. All we need is more personalities like Mr. Shelton to stimulate this interest.

CHARLOTTE COLLEGIAN

Editor	Howard Pearre
Assistant Editor	Richard Dancy
Business Manager	Jim Cunning
Photographers	Dick Raley Tommy Estridge
Columnists	Ellison Clary Dave Nanney, Martin Richey
Staff	Bettye Trapps Robert England, Sam Bailey, Nina Castles, Sharon Dailey, Rasmi Shalibi

Letters To The Editor

Achtung? Stay Out Of Red Sector

Editors, Charlotte Collegian

During the period of construction of the addition to the College Union and of the administration building, access to the campus from the west-parking lot will be limited. Immediate access to the C. U. from the parking lot will not be possible. Large excavation areas will make it impossible to go directly from the parking area to the C.U. during the early stages of construction. Access to the C. U. will be possible only through the main entrance until the project is completed.

A walkway from the parking area to the main campus walk in front of the library is being built.

The presence of heavy equipment and the large areas of excavation constitute a danger to all pedestrians. The requirements of construction insurance make it necessary for the construction companies to keep everyone not in their employ out of the construction area. This area has been fenced off and thereby clearly marked. All students and faculty are expected to observe the restrictions and to cooperate in every way with officials of the construction firms

Dean Donald M. MacKay

Dean Of Student Affairs

Playboy?

Editors, Charlotte Collegian

It seems that in our modern society, that hypocrisy is the prevailing mood of the people. In our colleges, the students are to learn about all aspects of life in a criti-

Dave's Raves

Time Moves On

By DAVE NANNEY

The end of each year is always disappointing to me for each year I approach the horizon. "A few more steps and I'll see." And when I take those few steps I see just another horizon! It is good that we are not content to stand in one place and look, for a clear perspective is good, but the particulars are also important, even though they are endless. And I think tears, sentiment and all that crinkles with an official pause in time are beneficial, as they represent a realization that a certain amount of time has been subtracted from our lives which means that the future is of more value. So much for the philosophical message for today!

One student said, "My only regret was that I was inhibited all year long from asking questions; I was afraid that the teachers might think I was stupid!" Another student said, "I'm still hungry; I feel as though I've eaten a good meal; digested the good part, eliminated the bad, and now I want to start all over again." Another said, "I'm soooooo very tired." Still another said, "I'm frantic; I feel like praying twice a year—the end of each semester before finals!" And cal view point. How, I ask, can this be accomplished if one of the outstanding magazines of today is left out of the library?

I'm sure that all the students of Charlotte College have read this magazine and I mean read (not just look at the pictures). I myself read all the articles in the magazine. The authors who contribute are well known and write very good stories.

I would like to see somebody at Charlotte College start a subscription for the library or the bookstore for Playboy Magazine. I feel that to be a true college, we should have this magazine on our campus.

George Vaughan

Carwash

Editors, Charlotte Collegian

The Charlotte College Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity held a car wash Tuesday, May 11, in the College Union parking lot. The future pledges started washing cars at 8:30 a.m. and a solid stream of cars kept them busy until 4:30 p.m.

The Chapter needed $25 to obtain it's charter and the car wash was more successful than expected. Through the efforts of the future pledges the Chapter made $29.95.

The men of the Charlotte College Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega are very grateful to the faculty and student body for helping them obtain enough money to get a charter.

Skipper Milton

Publicity Chairman, APO

Charlotte Sends Delegation To YRC Convention

The Charlotte College Young Republican Club sent a delegation consisting of six voting representatives and two non-voting alternatives to the North Carolina Young Republican college Council Spring Convention held May 7, 8, 9, in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Interviews with the returning delegates revealed that the convention lacked neither excitement nor controversy.

The majority of the Charlotte College YRC delegates were members of special convention committees. Rick Dancy was a co-Chairman of the Platform Committee. It was around this committee that one of the biggest controversies centered.

The conservative eastern majority objected to the platform as written by the committee and during the business session labeled it as "too liberal" and substituted a platform which was a much right wing sentiment.

The other major controversy centered around the College Council Chairman John R. Patton. Although he was elected with the aid of the extreme conservative element of the College Council at its previous convention in Charlotte, N. C., this same conservative element is now seeking his ouster

On the opening day of the May Convention this faction passed a number of resolutions of censure and no faith in Patton on Sunday, May 9, initiated impeachment proceedings against him. The charges were of a "general and vague nature" and supposedly date back almost to the day Patton was elected.

Patton termed the charges "ridiculous" and State Young Republican and Federation Chairman Hubert Teer branded the chairman who introduced the impeachment proceeding as "immature children."

The impeachment hearing has been set for Sunday, May 30, at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

During the business session Charlotte College formed a minority block along with the delegates from Salem, Wake Forest and Guilford colleges which tried to stop what Charlotte College delegate Sam Scott termed "obvious perversion of Republican ideals and goals . . . and an obvious railroad job" by the delegation of State, Duke, and Carolina.

Near the close of the business session the Charlotte College group, after a short speech delivered by Scott, walked off of the convention hall to begin strategy plans for the "returning of the College Council to the mainstream of both American and Republican thinking."

Post convention abuse by the extreme conservative element prompted the Charlotte College Young Republican Club to adopt five resolutions condemning the extremist factions of the party and wholeheartly supported Patton.