

Lovely Without Me
By "Daisy" Conant, N.Y.
Like a flower when sweet smelling it blooms
The flowers to the air expand
So does your presence brighten the scene
And fill my soul with fragrance that flows
I thought me twice of my love's smile
And yet, still thinking, thought I said
The man who lives without a wife
Has double sorrow on his head
'Tis strange! Before I see your face
I thought me only as any one
Proof to the claims of a woman's grace
Soft and true, to live alone
Not the perfume of the rose
The blush that blooms on honey's cheek
The fresh, sweet smile of dawn
The thrill I feel when you are near
Which tells me I am not alone
That when I see your face
Which tells me I am not alone
And all others and dainties like yours are White hulled nuts by the gentle air
Your eyes, lovely, your voice, your feet
Oh, you could I but possess your hand
To sit beside you on the seat
To walk beside you on the strand
To give you twenty years of passion
A shadow of the time I ought to be
Your offer, I say, I accept, a year
Sweet echo from the city.

A Magnificent Eulogy.
Apropos of the war effort, next Monday night, we reproduce the following eulogy on the greatest soldier of all time, spoken by Ben Hill, Georgia:
When the future historian comes to survey the character of Lee, he will find it rising like a huge mountain above the undulating plain of humanity, and he will have to lift his eyes high towards heaven to catch its summit. He possessed every virtue of the other great commanders without their vices. He was a foe without hate, a victor without treachery, a soldier without cruelty and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without faults, a private citizen without vices, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocrisy, and a man without guile. He was Caesar without his ambition, Frederick without his tyranny, Napoleon without his selfishness and Washington without his reward. He was obedient to authority as a servant and loyal in authority as a king. He was as gentle as a woman in life, pure and modest as a virgin in thought, watchful as a Roman vestal in duty, submissive to law as Socrates and grand in battle as Achilles.
