WHAT THE FIGURES SHOW.

As given in Sunday's Observer, the majority of Judge Faircloth, fusionist, over Judge Shepherd, Democrat, for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, declared by the State canvassing board, is 20,841. These gentlemen led their respective tickets, Judge Burwell running second on the Democratic and Judge Furches second on the fusion ticket. The total vote for Judge Faircloth was 145,997, and the total for Judge Shepherd, 126,447. Upon reference to the vote of North Carolina in 1892 it is found that Cleveland had 132,951, so that upon this basis the Democrats sustained this year a loss of 6,504. In 1892 Harrison had 100,242 and Weaver 44,736, which sums added give 144,978. The cloth's vote of 145,997 is 919 in excess of the combined Republican and Populist vote of two years ago. The hope of the fusionists from the beginning was that they would be able to bring together this year those who voted for Harrison and those who voted for Weaver: They not only succeeded in doing that, but they appear to have gained 919 Democratic voters. The Democrats, as shown, sustained a loss of 6,504. Giving the Populists 919 of these, we see that 5,585 Democrats stayed at home election day. In the absence of the official returns, and before the foregoing comparison was made, it was supposed that there were more. This much is to be said, however: The Democratic vote of '92 was a light one, being 9,365 short of that of 1890 and 15,707 short of 1888. We still, however, lack a majority in the State, and if the Democrats are to win in 1896 they must not only get out their full strength, but must make converts. There were singular exhibitions of silliness this year in the printing lost his election, and if the fusion majority had been narrow Mr. Coble would have lost—Observer.

TWO POLITICAL CRANKS.

With Kolb on one side of them and Pope on the other the people of Georgia have two picturesque object lessons before them, which plainly show the danger of going to extremes on any line.

Kolb is a Populist and Pope says he is a regulation Democrat, at least they are so classified, but it is only simple justice to say that they do not represent their parties. The Populists of Alabama have some peculiar ideas about the government ownership of railways, and other such propositions, but they are for law and order and prosperity. Their extreme and impracticable leader, however, is pursuing a course which is a menace to peace and welfare of his people, and if he had been supported in setting up a rival state government in Alabama there would have been serious trouble. His ideas and methods savor of anarchy, and are very evident that his party will refuse to back him in his erratic ventures.

Pope in South Carolina is no wiser than Kolb. Despite his defeat by 30,000 majority, he is claiming his election and making absurd charges of wholesale corruption. Although acting with the so called regular iron-clad Democracy, he does not represent them any more than Kolb represents the Populists of Alabama. The attitude of these two men shows how ridiculous and dangerous it is to go to unreasonable extremes in any cause. Kolb's greed for office has caused him to forget all about reforms his party is struggling for, and Pope intense anti-Tillman has led him to stir up just such strife and confusion as he charged Tillman with being responsible for. Pope's Democracy and Kolb's Populism are equally cranky, and it is not likely that more than a corporal's guard of their followers will stick to them. The best thing these two political brawlers can do is to go home and go to bed. The people of Alabama and South Carolina can get along without them. They have interests besides politics, and it is time more to give their diversified farming and cotton factories than to lay aside for the purpose of forcing Messrs Pope and Kolb into office after they have been defeated. By all means let these two cranks go to bed!—Atlanta Constitution.

PETERS TALKS WRITE.

Rev. Madison Peters, of Bloomingdale church, New York city, in a prelude to his sermon last Sunday said:

"Having recently spent a few weeks in the South I feel it to be my duty publicly to admit that I had, until I enlarged my information by personal observation, and entirely erroneous idea of the South, and I take this means publicly to apologize for those uncharitable thoughts. My lectures were on American lines, and my pleas for intense Americanism and more enthusiastic loyalty to American ideas, as laid down by the founders of our Republic, not everywhere with the heartiest response. If the tocsin of war would be sounded, a foreign foe invade our shores, or an insurrectionary body arise in our midst, a million men, armed to the teeth, would come from the South and rally round the flag of the Union. Why! The South is the only true American part of our nation today, because of the immigration which is now weakening and undermining the foundations of our society. Rebe! That word must henceforth not be spoken. I believe that the South today grasps the hand of the North in a fellowship which has in it no misgiving nor deceit. The public men of the South are not, as with us 'professional foreigners' who have made public office a public steal. The Southern men in public office are patriotic and devout, conscientiously American, and personally the embodiment of integrity. But you say they do not believe in negro domination. Neither do we North. We believe in the negroes filling the offices in the South. Enfranchising all the negroes immediately after their emancipation was practically one of the greatest mistakes ever made by any free government. In many counties and States the colored voters are in the majority, and a majority rule would take the government. Negro domination would mean white damnation."

The President's message is too long for our space. It is spoken of favorably and unfavorably by newspapers of all faith.

The New York Independent calls attention to the fact that there are a number of admirable colleges in this country that have no Presidents. The University of Virginia is cited as one of such institutions. The principle maintained by those who defend this method is that a college or university which has its departments organized into various "schools" does better without a President, while a college having a regular curriculum requires one.
