Concord, N. C.

CONCORD, MAY 27, 1895.

The patriotic action and magnificent benefaction of Mr. Charles B. Rouss, an ex-Confederate private soldier, in giving $100,000 to have a history of the South in the great war written and illustrated, is well done, and a timely and an excellent example to other men of means. Select the right man and have the precise facts given to the world in scholarly and admirable English. It is needed. The hats have had it their way long enough. Gen. Schofield's letter breathes a very different spirit from that of the editorial slanders and falsifiers "up there."—Wilmington Messenger.

THEY EAT HORSE MEAT.

Consul Tingle Points Out Openings for Profitable Trade With Germany.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.—Mr. F. W. S. Tingle, United States Consul at Burnswick, Germany, contributes interesting facts to the State Department about the consumption of horse meats as food in that country. Statistics as to the exact extent of this cannot be obtained, but in the large cities its consumption is almost as great as that of beef and mutton. In smaller cities prejudice against horse meat as food continues, therefore its consumption is not so great, being apparently about one-third that of beef, but even in the smaller cities the consumption of horse meat is growing. In the large cities there are numerous shops devoted exclusively to the sale of horse meat. The customers are the poor classes, but as these comprise nine-tenths of the consumers of the country, an idea may be had as to the proportions of the trade. With beef selling from 15 to 25 cents a pound it is only upon rare occasions that the workman earning from 75 cents to $1 a day can have beef. Horse meat can be had for 7 cents a pound, and as those who consume it become used to it, the demand increases until it is now somewhat difficult to meet the demand. Formerly the butcher procured horses that from age or injury were no longer fit for working purposes, at from $5 to $10 each. The supply of this class of horses is nearly exhausted and the butcher must now pay from $45 to $50 for a horse. The consequence is that just as people have become attracted to horse meat because of its cheapness, the butcher finds he must increase his prices.

Consul Tingle says:

"The horse supply in the United States is practically inexhaustible. Horses can be raised in the West much cheaper than cattle. They can be slaughtered easier or can be shipped across the sea much more easily than cattle and can be sold either on the hoof or dressed at a price certainly not over 7 cents a pound, which the German workman paid hitherto. Canning is out of the question, but the meat is consumed in Germany in both a salted and smoked state as well as fresh, and in either one of the three conditions American exporters could furnish it. With the rapid disease in the United States, the raising of horses now, especially in the West, is far from being the profitable industry it formerly was. However, if the ranchman can make the raising of horses for food profitable why should he not do it? It is true that in our own country the prejudice against eating horse meat is so great that there will probably never be a home demand for meat of that kind, but that is no reason why American ranchmen should not take advantage of the existence of a different state of things in another country to found what can be made a profitable industry and extensive export trade."

IN HONOR OF HEROES.

Corner Stone of a Confederate Monument Laid at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 25.—Eight hundred persons, including many Southern veterans, assembled at Confederate Circle, Third Avenue and D. street, this afternoon, to witness the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the monument to the memory of the Confederate dead. The total cost of the monument will be $12,000. All the money was raised by the Kentucky Woman's Confederate monument Association. It is to be a granite shaft, surmounted by the figure of a Confederate Infantry, while around the base will be figures representing the other branches of the service. Owing to the fact that the monument will be complete in thirty days the ceremonies were simple.

"A LADY FROM BOSTON."

Omnipresent, Serious and Blue-Spectacled Maiden From the Hub.

"At the sale of Oscar Wilde's bracelet in London last week," a cable dispatch says, "a young lady from Boston secured a quaintly inlaid Moorish folding tray and mirror."

Once again the hub is brought into prominence as a city whose sons and daughters value intellectuality even when there are flies on it.

"A young lady from Boston" always to be found in any part of the world where an action sale of interesting relics is going on. She is an omnipresent creature. You find her, with her blue goggles and her superior conversation, gazing at the Egyptian pyramids. If you visit the Acropolis, there, in solemn awe, stands "a young lady from Boston."

Nowhere in Europe, Africa or Asia can the traveler approach the historic shines of the past without finding that the maid with the wandering foot who bails from the hub is there before him.

"A young lady from Boston" should always be taken seriously. There is no nonsense about her. She has done a vast deal of thinking in her time, and expects to do it. It's a habit she has.

We should not be surprised to learn that the Swedish explorer who has discovered the North Pole found at that interesting spot the initials of "a young lady from Boston" carved on the very spot where there is no further north.—New York Journal.

The young gentlemen of the city have taken to horse shoes, as well as fans tans. The e are great games.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and manifested all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I believe my children would have been fatherless to-day had it not been for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, of which preparation I cannot say too much."—H. O. HISSON, Postmaster and Planter, Kinard's, S. C.
