MONEY.

NO. 10.

The value of a dollar, as some one has said, is the unknown amount of attraction existing between the mind and 412½ grains of silver or 258 grains of gold, each metal ninety-ninths fine. As a chemist would say it is the affinity existing between the mind and the pieces of metal. If A's mind has a greater affinity for B's hat than it has for A's dollar, and B's mind has a greater affinity for A's dollar than it has for the hat, A's dollar will fly to B, and B's hat will fly to A. If C's mind has a greater affinity for the druggist's glass of soda water than it has for five cents, and the druggist's mind has a greater affinity for the five cents than it has for the soda water, the soda water will move to C and the five cents will move to the druggist. The minds and the commodities group or arrange themselves according to their affinities. Those minds and commodities having the greatest affinities for one another will unite either permanently or temporarily according to the force of attraction which draws and binds them together.

Now millions of minds and millions of commodities are constantly attracting one another. Money and other commodities are kept going from one person to another until they finally arrive in hands by which they are more or less firmly held. This moving of money is called circulation and possesses many features that are extremely interesting. The idea of motion is intimately connected with that of circulation. If the movement of money be swift it is said that the circulation is rapid. If the movement is slow, then the circulation is said to be slow. If a hundred dollars move with the velocity or rapidity 10, it will do as much work as a thousand dollars moving with a velocity or rapidity 1. That is to say a hundred dollars circulating ten times as fast as a thousand dollars will accomplish the same amount of work. This is illustrated by what are called good times and bad times. During the former business is active, money circulates freely, whilst during the latter, business is dull and money moves slowly or not at all.

The motive power behind circulation is confidence. When men are confident that they can make money by making investments they are very likely to make them. Where there is a lack of confidence as to whether an enterprise or investment will pay, prudent men will be very careful as to how and to what extent they take hold. Will an investment pay, is the first question the cautious business man asks himself before engaging in any speculative or other enterprise.

It should be observed that it is not the confidence of the reckless venturer that gives ease and rapidity to circulation. Some men seem to have confidence in any kind of enterprise and would borrow money by the thousands of dollars to invest on the principle that, if it pays, I win, but, if it does not pay, you, the creditor, lose. It is the confidence of the cautious business man, who is governed by reason and not by impulse, that is the main factor in promoting business activity. It is

N. C. ROAD RE-LEASED.

The Southern Case It for 99 Years—The Standard Foreshadowed What Was Coming.

The directors of the North Carolina Railroad met at Burlington Friday. The full board was present. The board held a preliminary meeting in the morning. Private stockholders present held a meeting. President Sam'l Spencer and Vice President Andrews were present.

A dispatch sent out Friday night from Burlington is as follows:

The afternoon session of the directors was as private as the morning session and late this afternoon the work was done and the North Carolina Railroad became the property of the Southern for ninety-nine years at an annual rental of 6½ per cent for six years and 7 per cent for ninety-three years, which means forever. The North Carolina road will in the future declare a dividend of 6½ per cent per annum, which subjects it to taxation which the Southern pays as well as the keeping up of the road bed, etc., as in the old lease.

The Southern officials came prepared to consummate the work today and the papers will be signed up before they leave on a special which is waiting on the yard at this hour, 10 p. m. The vote of the board was almost unanimous, but it could not be had tonight.

THE STANDARD, in Wednesday's issue, published the first information of the expected re-release on Friday, though many thought otherwise.

Buggy Stolen.

Last Tuesday night some one stole the new Columbus buggy and harness of Mr. Chas. A. Murph, who lives in No. 4.

The same night Mr. Murph's buggy was stolen a horse was taken from Mr. Rogers, who lives across the Rowan line. It is supposed that the same fellow stole both.

Mr. Murph has offered a $15 reward for the recovery of his buggy.

Mr. Miller's Blooded Colt.

Col. J. A. King informs the Landmark that Mr. D. A. Miller, who is something of a horse man, is the proud and happy possessor of a thoroughbred colt, which he purchased from a Georgia stock farm, for the sum of $200 in hand paid. The colt has been put in charge of Mr. Sam Gates, a noted turfman and horse-trainer, who will give it a proper education and fit it for coming out into society. Col. King is evidently impressed with Mr. Miller's purchase, but he says it has a few slight defects—mere trifles which he enumerated in part. It is, he said, oat-hammed, slab-sided, hog-backed, rabbit-breasted, shad-bellied, ewe-necked, hammer-headed, knock-kneed and has crooked hind legs. "But," said the colonel in conclusion, "it is long of limb and light of body and will probably outgrow these slight defects."

Statesville Landmark. [It is not often that a native Cabarrus man—one like Mr. Dan Miller—will go off and have himself come in possession of a beast like the one the Landmark's horse editor describes.]

Land Posted Notice.

SOUL-STIRRING MUSIC.

Sunday School Convention at Center Grove, in No. 4 Township—Despite the Inclement Weather. Quite a Crowd Gathered—Next Meeting to be Held at Mt. Olivet.

No. 4 township Sunday school convention convened Thursday, at Center Grove. Vice President John A. Fiak called the convention to order and despite the inclement weather, quite a crowd soon gathered in the beautifully decorated church, and were greeted by several happy little voices in song and a welcome address.

All the churches of the township were well represented, the reports full and encouraging.

The programme consisted of recitations and dialogues, which were all rendered and appropriately interspersed with soul-stirring and inspiring music by the choirs present. The pleasant social period was somewhat interfered with by a shower of rain which began to fall soon after the sumptuous repast had been spread in the grove. But most of those present lingered long enough to do ample justice to the many good things so invitingly set before them. Those are a kind hearted people and notwithstanding the gloomy weather every one went away feeling that the day had been both pleasantly and profitably spent.

The next annual convention will meet at Mt. Olivet.

Dr. J. S. Lafferty made a brief talk. The convention then adjourned with the benediction by Rev. Marks, after singing, "God Be with you till we meet again."

A Sudden Call.

Mr. R. M. Austin, a popular and well-known citizen of Mocksville, dropped dead Wednesday morning. While sitting at the breakfast table he informed his family that he was blind and could not understand his peculiar feeling. Suddenly he fell back in his chair dead. He would have fallen on the floor had not a member of the family caught him. Heart trouble is thought to have been the cause of his death.
