As Busy as Can Be.

About the thriftest scene in or near the city is the work going on at the Cannon factory, not particularly on the new factory building, but everything in general.

Equire McAllister and Contract or Brown are rushing the brick work right along. Carpenters began this (Tuesday) afternoon to place the large sills in the main building of the new addition, while the masons were laying the foundation to the large picker room.

Contractor Caldwell is in the push also, and is as busy as can be, although he was discommoded a little by not getting his cement.

J. L. Miller lay the foundation for another new cottage on Powder street this morning, while his force of hands are about to complete one near by.

The extension of the sidetrack, which runs some distance above the old mill and to where the engine room to the new mill will be is, complete, which makes everything quite convenient to remove the large timbers from the cars.

On to the north of the Cannon mills several hundred yards can be seen very conspicuously a number of new brick houses in course of erection at the Buffalo mill.

A gentleman, a very prominent and wealthy citizen of Atlanta, who was in company with the reporter, remarked: "Your little city is not a dead one by any means; in all parts building is going on and everybody is as busy as can be. It is far ahead of any town I know of on my route."

The Town Script.

If Concord would issue bonds for the amount it has out in interest-bearing script, the town would be paying at least 2 per cent. if not 3 per cent less interest.
