VANDERBILT'S IDEA.

Biltmore to be the Resort of People With Scientific Hobbies.

New York Sun: In the great outlay which George Vanderbilt is making at Biltmore, in North Carolina, the young millionaire has entertained a more serious purpose than is generally known. A great deal has been written about the enormous house, with its library chapel, scores of bed-rooms, and the army of servants which will be required to keep it up, but not every one knows that Mr. Vanderbilt intends to make his estate a Mecca for all those who are seriously interested in the study of forestry, scientific farming and horticulture. He has land enough to carry out any scheme of this sort, no matter how big it may be, as he can go forty miles in a direct line from his own door without passing the confines of his domain. He proposes, therefore, to create a neighborhood of his own on this vast property, which includes, among other cultivated tracts, one forest alone of more than 100,000 acres. He will build a village containing houses, stores, a picturesque inn, and apartments will be rented to all properly accredited students who desire to avail themselves of the facilities offered there for the study of the sciences which are his hobby. The farm will be conducted after the most approved scientific fashion, and forestry, which is almost unknown in America, and will become in a few years a science of the greatest importance to us, will be carried on experimentally and practically to an extent never before attempted in this country. Mr. Vanderbilt has just returned to new York from Biltmore, where he has been spending the summer in a completed wing of his great mansion. He expects to have the house finished in time for a Christmas house warming, the guests at which will be chiefly members of his own family. Edgar Poe wrote a story once about a man whose income was so large that landscape gardening was the only hobby that could make any serious inroads on it, and it may be said that it was this story that gave Mr. Vanderbilt his idea.

Burglars in China Grove.

Salisbury Herald: Our bright little neighbor, China Grove, seems to be infested with burglars. About a week ago the store of Mr. J. L. Holshouser was broken into, and now another one has been entered. Wednesday night some one broke into the store of Mr. J. M. Winecoff. The thief entered through the floor of a shed room and then forced a door which opens into the store. The amount goods stolen cannot be correctly determined. Several articles of jewelry, a pair of shoes and all the money in the store—a handful of coppers—was taken. There is no clue to the robber.

Will Sit Next Thursday.

On Thursday next Mr. J. M. Burage will set upon the case of L. W. Dry against John W. Widenhouse, for removing hay belonging to plaintiff.

J. M. W. Alexander took out claim and delivery papers for a bale of cotton sold to Cannons & Fetzer by A. Mack Starns. The case will be tried before Esquire O. A. Pitts on Thursday at 11 o'clock. Deputy Hill seized the cotton and will hold it until the affair is settled.

Nothing to Say.

His gold mounted fountain pen, loaded with ink, was poised, while he paused for a moment to think: And he thought and he thought, while the moments they sped, Of something to say that had not been said.

He thought of the charms that the spring brings to view; Of the joys that the summer and autumn renew; Of the splendors of winter—including the snow— But bookfuls of poems said silently "No!"

The jargon of hoodlums he thought to rehearse; To patter in various dialect verse; To dig up a hero—an infamous one— But newly-cut magazines murmur " 'Tis done!"

He thought of a plot, and he thought and he thought, And with crime, sin and scandal most deftly he wrought; But a newspaper story attracted his eye. And he let go his commonplace plot with a sigh.

His gold-mounted fountain pen, loaded with ink, Still poised, while he paused, too weary to think; Then, capping his fountain, he takes to his bed— There was nothing to say that had not been said! —Authors' Journal.

A Slick Negro in Norfolk.

The Norfolk Virginian of a recent date gives an account of a smart negro's money trick in Norfolk, as follows:

"A number of cotton men of this city are grieving over the loss of sums ranging from $5 to $15 at the hands of a slick negro swindler. The plan of the swindler was to go to some cotton buyer and represent that he was a grower from North Carolina and had come to Norfolk to sell several bales of the fleecy staple, which was; then on a car en route to Norfolk. He would strike a bargain with the buyer and leave an order on the railroad company to deliver twenty or more bales of his cotton to the person named in such order. Leaving the place, he would soon return and ask an advance of $5 or so, which would readily be granted him. Several of the cotton buyers are still waiting for the cotton, which has not yet arrived. The negro claimed to be from Tarboro, N. C., and gave his name as Turner Wilkins.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best Cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Fetzer's Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Somewhat Changed.

It is told on a certain school teacher of little experience who recently entered upon his functions, addressed his pupils as follows:

"Children, attention! I will now call over the names; but as the old method takes too long, I will simplify it thus: 'All those who are absent raise their hands.'"

Too Soon to Begin.

The young men who exploded the fire crackers Friday night are rather premature with that sport, so to speak, and the very next thing that's done will be an arrest, or a very lively chase. It may have been thought that the boys thought just because Evangelist Monroe Wilenhouse was in town that it was time for such festivities and hilarities, and took advantage of the the occasion to celebrate accordingly.

Two Roses.

A STANAARD reporter is the happy possessor of two very pretty and rare roses, one donated by a lady friend and the other plucked by a gentleman. The sequel runs thusly: The lady friend explained that the beautiful pink rose was grown on a white rose bush, the La France variety, which is a very uncommon thing; the gentleman, of unquestionable veracity, states that his, a lovely pure white specimen, was grown upon a green rose bush, which is usually common.

In the "Hoeks."

Sheriff Sims was summoned to Mr. Milt Morris' place Friday afternoon to arrest one Jonas Hinson, for an assault upon Mr. Morris with an axe. Hinson did not strike his landlord, but made a desperate attempt. The Sheriff got his game, however, and had brought the young man as far as Scott's seminary, about 7:30 o'clock at night, when he made a break for liberty, taking the back track and refuge in the wood near his father's house. The sheriff and several others shadowed the man until 4 o'clock this (Saturday) morning, when Mr. Sims again nabbed him and succeeded in reaching town with him.
